Senate Body Will Hear Mitchell Charge Today In $1,700,000 "Graft"

Ousted Roper Aid Will Bare Plan to Rescind Leviathan Claims.

Note to Roosevelt Asks Full Probe

Offers to 'Clean Up' Commerce 'Waste' for $1 Yearly.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Ewing Y. Mitchell, ousted last Saturday by President Roosevelt as Assistant Secretary of Commerce, at 10 a. m. today will appear before the Senate Commerce Committee to detail his charges of "improper favoritism, graft, apparent corruption," inefficiency and waste in the Department of Commerce.

He will be prepared particularly to tell the Senate Committee about a contract signed last March 19 by Secretary of Commerce Daniel Calhoun Roper, relieving the United States Lines of paying the Treasury $1,700,000 as liquidated damages for permanently laying up the Leviathan.

In a letter to President Roosevelt, made public yesterday by Mr. Mitchell, the latter urged that the President rescind this contract, which he alleged benefited close friends of Mr. Roosevelt, and that the facts in this case be laid before a grand jury "to the end that all those who have been guilty of a violation of the criminal code in connection therewith, if any there be, shall be prosecuted without regard to their high official positions or their eminent places in the business world."

Offers to Serve for $1 a Year.

Mr. Mitchell in the same letter suggested that the President instruct the Attorney General to name him as a special assistant for prosecutions and recoveries of funds arising out of matters under control of the Commerce Department. As such, he said, he would serve "to clean up the graft and waste in that department" at a salary of $1 a year.

In this new letter to the President, written after he was removed from office, Mr. Mitchell did not make any further charges, except one in general terms that "ships costing millions of dollars and in perfect condition were being delivered for scrapping on an illegal contract."

Tells of Baltimore Deal.

Elaborating this charge in a press conference, Mr. Mitchell said he had reference to a contract made several days before the 1932 Presidential election between the Shipping Board and the Boston Iron & Metall Co., of Baltimore, for the sale to the latter for scrapping purposes of 124 ships at $4,600 each. He said he abrogated the contract when he discovered it, but only after 40 ships had been turned over to the Baltimore company, which, he added, made a profit of $35,000 on each one.

The purpose of this most recent letter to the President was to protest against being dismissed without being given a hearing or granted an interview and to warn that just as "President Grant had the Star route mail scandal; President Harding had the Teapot Dome Oil Scandal" so, too, Mr. Roosevelt "may be confronted with a shipping scandal."

Two Inquirers Support Claims.

Meanwhile, the Mitchell charges cut across two inquiries on Capitol Hill, which are well-advanced and give some color of substantiation to the charges now being made. One of these is the inquiry of the Black committee into air and ocean mail subsidies. The other the Commerce Department's inquiry into Federal supervision of shipping and safety at sea.

The Black committee yesterday presented to the Senate a preliminary report on its inquiry into ocean mail contracts, contending that the present system of ship subsidies had resulted in a "saturna-

House Passes Bill to Insure AAA's Legality

By Robert C. Albright.

Setting a swift adjournment stride, the House yesterday passed its second major Administration measure in two days, called up a third for consideration today, and virtually cleared committee dockets of appropriations legislation.

While the Senate moved more slowly toward a vote on the social security bill today, the House, by a 168-to-52 standing vote, approved far-reaching Agriculture Adjustment Administration amendments, reputedly bringing that agency within constitutional limitations but definitely expanding its scope.

The Wagner labor disputes bill, clinching collective bargaining guarantees under the old NRA law, meantime was given right of way today by the Rules Committee, under an open rule permitting a total of only four hours' debate. It has passed the Senate.

The quick step was in response to spurs being rigorously applied by leaders on both sides of the Capitol, in an effort to whip through the Roosevelt program, largely intact, within the next month. They are prepared to make minor sacrifices in the interest of speed.

The second deficiency bill, last of the big appropriation measures, will be reported to the House today or tomorrow.

Steps Listed.

The accelerated legislative tempo was evidenced by the following developments:

1. House and Senate conferees on the Navy appropriations bill broke a brief deadlock over increased Navy construction, by a compromise slightly in the Senate's favor. An increase of about $6,000,000 over House construction figures was voted. Navy officials say this will permit them to lay down 1 aircraft carrier, 2 light cruisers, 15 destroyers and 6 submarines, with little delay.

2. Chairman Robert L. Doughton ordered night hearings beginning at 7:30 today on the Admin-

Plan of Ickes Would Swell Relief Fund

By Felix Bruner.

Plans for adding hundreds of millions of dollars to the $4,000,000,000 works relief fund in an effort to make possible useful building and construction projects, in spite of cost limitation set by President Roosevelt, were revealed yesterday by Secretary Ickes.

At the same time Ickes issued detailed figures showing that average cost per man per year of 72 types of PWA projects has been nearly twice the $1,100 limitation set by the President. The list covered almost every kind of "useful" work proposed under the new program and was evidently intended to show the difficulty, if not impossibility, of coming within the prescribed restrictions.

While tension within the Administration following the President's action in making Harry L. Hopkins virtual czar of the works program was obviously growing, it was learned that Hopkins had added fuel to the fire by hiring as a State administrator a man previously fired by Ickes from his job as a State PWA engineer.

Meeting Continued.

Meanwhile, works progress administrators from 48 States, who will spend most of the works money, continued to meet in Washington to receive instructions. It was said there would be no similar meeting of PWA State heads. One official said "it isn't worth while to call a meeting."

Ickes announced that he believed local projects could be financed by a combination of old PWA money and new works money. Under the PWA, bonds totaling between $700,000,000 and $750,000,000 have been accepted as collateral for PWA loans. Ickes proposes that these bonds be sold and that the proceeds be loaned to States and municipalities proposing approved projects.

On this basis an outright grant of 45 per cent of the cost of the project would be made from the works fund. The remainder would be loaned from proceeds of the sale of the bonds and new securities accepted as collateral for the loans. These new securities could be sold and the money reloaned.

With only 45 per cent of the cost of such projects thus coming out of the works appropriation, Ickes believes this figure will not run over, as it affects average projects, the average cost of $1,100 per man per year, which must include materials as well as wages.

The bonds now in the possession of the PWA include railroad and municipal securities. Already $100,000,000 worth of such securities have been sold with the RFC acting as "broker," but most of this money was reloaned before the start of the present program.

Under the new law, the PWA may sell bonds directly, through the RFC, or to the RFC. The RFC is authorized to buy and carry up to $250,000,000 of these bonds.

This plan will in effect add hundreds of millions to the works program and put thousands of men to work with money that is not part of the appropriation.

The cost-per-man figures made public by Ickes show that the average cost, based on a 30-hour week, with payments made only for actual work, was $2,132. These figures cover only completed projects. A majority of the projects listed by Ickes would be paid for on an hourly basis rather than on the

Britain Signs Pact For Big Reich Navy

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

London (Wednesday), June 19.—A split in the close co-operation among the former allied powers—Britain, France and Italy—was feared today as a result of the new British government's granting Germany submarine parity and a 35-100 naval ratio with its own.

Both France and Italy dispatched cool notes to the Government headed by Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, registering reservations at the terms of the Anglo-German sea strength understanding.

Their attitude failed to deter Britain from rushing to completion her accord with Adolf Hitler and granting the Reich a navy larger than Italy's and approaching that of France—in further violation of the Treaty of Versailles.

The terms, outlined in a "white paper," include:

1. Germany shall have a navy 35 to 100 with the British, or approximately 400,000 tons, figured on the present British strength.

2. The Reich shall have the right to possess submarine tonnages equal to the total submarine tonnages possessed by members of the British commonwealth of nations.

3. The Reich thus is permitted an increase of 250,000 tons over the 150,000 tons allowed under the treaty of Versailles, now scrapped.

4. Germany pledges to adhere to the 35-100 ratio with Britain, regardless of the naval building programs of other sea powers. This ratio is to be "permanent"—until revised in future.

5. The new ratio is to be by classes of warships—that is, Germany may have 35 per cent the number of tons Britain has in, say, submarines, or battleships, or cruisers, and so on, but may not concentrate on one class, building 80 per cent in cruisers, for example, and spreading the rest over other types of craft.

6. A 5 per cent sliding scale is provided, permitting Germany to build up to 40 per cent in some categories.

The British "White Paper" indicated a strong British determination to hold a five-power naval conference, as scheduled, during 1935, for consideration of general naval treaty revision.

Sir Samuel Hoare, new foreign secretary, hailed the accord as a contribution of greatest importance for the future of naval limitation. He said it would "facilitate the conclusion of a general agreement on the subject of naval limitation between all naval powers of the world."

The powers to attend the world conference include Britain, the United States, Japan, France and Italy. Germany possibly now may be included.

Notes from both France and Italy expressing reservations on the project failed to check Britain from proceeding with her newly formed

President Asks NRA to Study Code Situation

Agency Will Probe Change in Labor, Wages Due to Death of 'Eagle.'

As the new NRA struggled with the problem of learning just what it is expected to do, President Roosevelt yesterday gave it an assignment to determine and report on changes that have occurred in wage and labor conditions and fair practice standards since abolition of codes.

The President asked that a special committee be named to undertake this job, but no announcement was made as to its members.

Meanwhile, as a step toward solution of the NRA personnel problem, involving finding of jobs for most of the 5,400 employes, lists were being made designating employes in groups under civil service and not under the service. This was for the purpose of transferring civil service employes to regular departments when they are needed and retaining as many as possible of other employes in the NRA and other emergency agencies.

"In line with our recent discussion, I am requesting you to set up in the Division of Business Co-operation a section devoted to accumulating, checking and reporting accurate information concerning the extent to which changes occur in the maintenance of labor standards or fair practice provisions of codes of fair competition, following the abolition of such codes.

"It is of primary importance that this work should be done very carefully and under the supervision of an impartial committee, which might be constituted as follows: An impartial chairman, a representative of management and a representative of labor and a member designated by the Department of Commerce and another by the Department of Labor. Through such a committee this work may be coordinated with the informational services of the Departments of Commerce and Labor and with similar services maintained by organizations of employers and employes.

"Information should be collected through field offices and other available sources under such supervision that reports sent to Washington can be checked, compiled and put in form for appropriate publication with assurance that they are accurate and as comprehensive as possible. It should be emphasized that the purpose of this work is the gathering and publication of reliable information and to counteract any propaganda from private sources which may be designed to promote a special interest."

In a radio address last night, Emily Newell Blair, woman member of the Advisory Council to the new NRA, urged consumer representation in all trade agreements and voluntary codes as an essential to fair treatment of all groups concerned with business.

Roosevelt Asks A Tighter Grip On Liquor Laws

Bill Providing Extension of Control in Industry Given to House.

Legislation extending the Federal Government's control over the liquor industry, by a system of permits, occupational taxes and specified unfair trade practices, was approved yesterday by the President and introduced in the House by Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Displacing the old Federal Alcohol Control Administration's code control over liquor, invalidated by the Supreme Court's Schechter case decision, the measure puts administration of the law under a new FACA division of the Treasury Department. Chairman Doughton immediately scheduled night Ways and Means Committee hearings on the measure, beginning at 7 p. m. today.

Introduction of the bill brought sharp repercussions from 453 of the Nation's 742 licensed breweries now conferring in Chicago. According to Associated Press, the conference adopted a resolution expressing "unalterable" opposition "to any statute system of brewery control which places the brewers under permit and writes into this statute an inflexible code of fair trades practices * * *."

Heading the Treasury's new Federal Alcohol Control Administration would be an administrator, salaried at $10,000, and authorized to make appointments "without regard to the Civil Service laws and the classification act of 1923."

An occupational tax of $10 could be levied on liquor importers, shippers, distillers, rectifiers or blenders and wholesale purchasers of liquor for resale. The bill makes it unlawful to engage in any of these businesses without a permit obtained from the new FACA.

Importers, distillers, rectifiers, brewers and other handlers of distilled spirits, wines or malt beverages subject to the provisions, may appeal in the circuit courts from any order of the FACA denying an application for, or suspending, revoking or annulling a basic permit, within 60 days after issuance of the order. But the finding of the administrator as to facts, if supported by "substantial evidence," would be conclusive. No objection to the order could be considered by the court unless it was first made to the administrator, or there were reasonable grounds for failure to do so.

Permits would be conditioned on compliance with declarations of "unfair competition and unlawful practices" contained in the bill. It would be unlawful to establish an "exclusive outlet" through a retailer in restraint of interstate trade; to induce retailers to sell products exclusively, by means of a "tied house;" to promote an exclusive market by commercial bribery; to sell liquor on consignment by commercial bribery; to sell liquor on consignment, or conditionally, or with the privilege of return; or to engage in deceptive labeling, advertising, or use of an "unfair name."

Permits would be conditioned further to prohibit any officer or director from acting as officer or director of any other corporation, stock company, business trust or association engaged in the business of producing, importing, rectifying, blending, bottling, warehousing or selling at wholesale or retail, distilled spirits, wine or malt beverages.

Huey's Sound-Trucks to Blare 'Share Wealth' on Tour of U. S.

Senator Huey P. Long, Louisiana's Kingfish and the Roosevelt Administration's constant critic, will make a barnstorming tour of the country this summer, preaching his share-the-wealth gospel, his secretary, Earle J. Christenberry, announced yesterday.

Moreover the Kingfish will take along his two famous sound trucks to facilitate his speechmaking. Christenberry said that the schedule had not been completed but that Senator Long would open his tour in New England and gradually work his way around the country.

His first speech is scheduled for July 13 at Stamford, Conn. All the meetings will be held under the auspices of the Long share-the-wealth societies which he has organized throughout the country. Most of the share-the-wealth members will get their first opportunity during this tour to see and hear the Kingfish in person.

Kingfish Long and his sound trucks are famous in the swamplands of Louisiana and Arkansas, as well as the mountainous sections of the latter States. In those districts his meetings attract huge crowds to find amusement, if not always political inspiration, in the Kingfish's words and antics. Whether conservative New England will react in the same way remains to be seen.

Senator Long's sound trucks first became nationally famous in 1932 when he stumped Arkansas and concededly carried that State over strong opposition for Mrs. Hattie Caraway for the Democratic senatorial nomination. He works the trucks in relays. As he speaks from one truck in a small town, the other proceeds to another town and on arrival immediately begins playing popular tunes to attract an audience.

China Agrees To Evacuate Chahar Area

Gen. Sung Is Dismissed to Meet Demands of Japanese.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Tientsin, China, June 18.—China, yielding again to Japanese army demands, today ousted Gen. Sung Cheh-Yuan as governor of Chahar Province and ordered the 132d Chinese Division to evacuate Chahar.

That was the price the iron-fisted Japanese demanded in settlement of the "Changpei incident," the detention last week at Changpei of four Japanese whose papers, Chinese officials asserted, were not in order.

Japanese spokesman also hinted that liquidation of the Chahar issue brought all phases of the three-week-old North China crisis "to the stage of amicable settlement."

Maj. Gen. Kenji Doihara, director of the special service division of Japan's Kwantung army, and the "Lawrence of Manchuria," announced the "principal terms" of the Chahar settlement, saying the final agreement would be reached at Kalcan, near the scene of the incident.

Chin Named Governor.

To replace the dismissed Gen. Sung as Chahar governor, the National government at Nanking named Civil Commissioner Chin Teh-Chuan, whom Japanese army spokesmen praised highly for his work on behalf of Sung in the Changpei issue.

At Nanking, the National government declined to comment on Sung's dismissal, although an official statement said "another military post awaits him which has not been decided."

As though to emphasize the completeness of the Japanese army's bloodless victory in its controversy with China, veteran Japanese troops garrisoned at Tientsin during the last year began moving out, leaving only 800 new arrivals here.

Japanese officers said concentration of troops along the Great Wall would continue, however, although they denied any "drastic action" in north China was contemplated.

Japanese Elated.

Japanese residents cheered loudly as the veteran troops entrained for Tangku. Simultaneously more Chinese troops moved southward in compliance with Japan's demands of May 29. A division at Peiping began evacuation, and it was expected all Gen. Yu Hsueh-Chung's army would be out of Hopei province by June 26. Three Japanese army airplanes oversaw the Chinese soldiers' movements.

A spokesman for the army, commenting on the Chahar settlement, expressed surprise at the appointment of Chin as governor, saying "the national government has gone further than we expected."

Aside from his work as negotiator, the new governor is little known here. He was chief of staff under the "Christian general," Feng Yuh-Siang, who once ruled Chahar, and formerly served in the Shangtung provincial government.

Chinese circles here minimized the effects of Sung's removal, saying he would retain control of Chahar affairs because he heads the army.

Russian Girls Claim Chute Record.

Moscow, June 18. (U.P.).—A world record for a women's parachute jumping exhibition without oxygen equipment was claimed by six young Russian women today.

The girls dived from a large transport plane at a height of 7,035 meters (23,075 feet). The previous record was held by a Leningrad girl, who made a similar leap from an altitude of 6,350 meters (20,828 feet).

81% Humidity Adds to Discomfort; 3 Treated for Prostration.

The temperature climbed to a new high for the year in the District yesterday, when it reached a maximum of 94 degrees at 3:15 p. m.

Only slight, sultry winds stirred through the sweltering city. The humidity was excessive, officials said. The reading was 81 per cent at 8 a. m.

Three persons received treatment for heat prostration, police reported.

Thomas E. Anthony, 29, no address given, received first-aid at Emergency Hospital, where he remained under observation. Two other persons, both unidentified, were treated at their homes for minor heat strokes.

Heavy showers were expected to bring relief to Washington today. The Weather Bureau predicted lower temperatures and rain this morning and this afternoon.

No sooner had Government offices closed for the day than thousands of workers swarmed to Hains Point for the cooling river breezes or went to swimming pools.

Children splashed in the numerous fountains. Several youngsters were observed in bathing suits in the Monument Pool.

Polish Laborers Riot As France Expels Them

Paris, June 18 (AP).—Several hundred Polish laborers stormed their country's consulates in Paris and Lille and fought police today in violent demonstrations over their expulsion in France's campaign against unemployment.

Trapped Kansans Hold 12 Hostages

Rioters Demand Better Food and Discharge of Official.

By the United Press.

Lansing, Kans., June 18.—Mutinous convicts on the 720-foot level of the Kansas Prison coal mine tonight opened a new attack upon four guards caged at the opening of the air shaft.

They set fire to hay in an underground mule barn and a thick cloud of smoke poured out of the shaft. The guards donned gas masks and hurled tear gas bombs in retaliation.

The fire started near the arsenal which the convicts attempted to storm a few hours before.

Deputy Warden A. J. Graham authorized guards in the besieged gun cage to fire buckshot if necessary to repel the strikers.

Prison authorities announced that guards had fired buckshot into a group of prisoners but that they were unable to ascertain whether anyone had been wounded or killed.

The mule barn fire spread to supporting timbers of the mine. Guards made no attempt to extinguish it and the convicts retreated far from the air shaft to escape the smoke.

Demand Doctor's Removal.

After the 380 prisoners were driven back in their first attempt to storm the stronghold they began throwing lumps of coal and rocks in an effort to extinguish electric lights in the cage. Apparently they hoped to charge the cage under cover of darkness.

Demanding better food and removal of Dr. David F. Parker, prison physician, the prisoners gave no indication of surrendering. Spokesmen for the convicts said they wanted Dr. Parker removed "because two men have died in the last two weeks following appendicitis operations."

The first convict to die, they said, was Tom Kelly, Wichita, Kans. His death two weeks ago was followed by that of George Lee, Negro, who will be buried tomorrow.

Guards in the gun cage, blocking the only path to possible freedom, reported to prison officials they were confident they could hold the convicts at bay. They were O. M. Johnson, Fred Murray, John Christian and John Stewart.

At the surface additional guards were held in readiness to be sent down the air shaft to aid the men besieged in the cage. Warden Lacey M. Simpson brought additional ammunition from nearby Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary.

Mine Superintendent Robert H. Murray descended into the pit to hear the prisoners' grievances and he was seized as a hostage along with 11 other guards taken by surprise early today.

Cut off Telephones.

The mutineers cut all telephone lines into the mine except one to the beleaguered gun cage.

The gun cage rests at the foot of the air shaft so that guards could rake the mine level if necessary.

It was the third time in the history of the prison mine that convicts had rebelled. On one occasion they went on a hunger strike for 76 hours.

Warden Simpson said the prisoners may have secreted a small store of food, but doubted whether they had any weapons other than knives and picks.

The mutiny began soon after the convicts had descended into the mine at 6:15 a. m. All had been marched from breakfast to the shaft and lowered to the 720-foot level.

A few minutes later Mine Superintendent Murray notified Warden Simpson that the prisoners had refused to pick up their shovels and picks and that five convicts had attempted to block the air shaft.

Bones, No Gems, in War Cache Returned to Rumania by Soviet

By the Associated Press.

Constanza, Rumania, June 18.—Nearly 300 large crates containing miscellaneous war-time properties, which Soviet Russia returned to Rumania presumably in gratitude for this country's recent recognition of the U. S. S. R., arrived today.

Rumanian authorities quickly threw platoons of soldiers around the piles of "valuables" to protect them from thieves.

A special commission of experts appointed to make an inventory of the properties plunged into the cases. They hoped to find:

1. Rumania's crown jewels, worth $50,000,000, which were sent to Moscow for safekeeping when the Germans threatened to overrun Rumania in 1916.

2. The country's national treasure of gold, amounting to $105,000,000, sent to the Russian capital at the same time.

They found:

1. A human skeleton in an ancient coffin.

2. Several tons of musty archives, books and documents, largely valueless.

3. A few thousand faded old Rumanian bank notes, now worth about 40 cents.

The skeleton, it was discovered, was that of King Cantemir, who ruled Moldavia in the eighteenth century and who died at Petrograd in 1810. It was learned the Soviet intends to return still other skeletons to the Rumanians, among them probably the bones of the Rumanian princess who ruled Wallachia and Moldavia 150 years ago and died in Russia.

The missing crown jewels include three of Dowager Queen Marie's ropes of pearls, clusters of diamonds, and heaps of rubies, emeralds and sapphires.

Income Taxes Will Net Billion For Last Year

By the Associated Press.

The income tax thermometer of business activity yesterday indicated a possible bounce of $60,000,000 above January budget estimates for the financial year ending June 30.

For the 12-month period, President Roosevelt forecast income tax payments of $1,050,000,000. On June 15, $930,836,624 had been collected.

But the Treasury estimate of total June collections on the basis of the first 15 days was $272,000,000. Thus far, only $85,425,413 actually has reached the cash till, although large sums are in the hands of collectors. If the remaining $186,574,587 of the estimate comes in as expected, the year's total would reach $1,117,411,000.

June is the month of second-quarter installment payments on 1934 incomes.

Seek to Boost Revenue.

Meanwhile, plans were made yesterday by liberal Senate Republicans and some Democrats to try to boost Federal revenue by slapping new levies on the $502,000,000 nuisance tax bill in the Senate.

Approaching the revenue issue from different angles, Senators La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, advocate of higher income taxes; Connally (Democrat), Texas, proponent of heavy inheritance taxes, and Long (Democrat), Louisiana, a capital levy backer, made known their intentions.

While this move was shaping up on Capitol Hill, a tax talk apparently was in progress at the White House. President Roosevelt conferred for an hour with Treasury and Internal Revenue officials including Secretary Morgenthau. Those emerging from the conference said only that it involved "Treasury matters."

Administration Views Sought.

Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, said he would confer with President Roosevelt soon to ascertain the Administration's views on tax legislation. Harrison is chairman of the Finance Committee, which will consider in executive session today the resolution to continue two years the $502,000,000 in nuisance levies. The resolution was adopted on Monday by the House.

The Administration was represented as being anxious to get the nuisance tax bill through before the present levies expire June 30, and the question to be considered, Senator Connally said, was whether the Administration wanted to take a chance of delaying the bill to get additional tax levies. The Government would lose about $1,500,000 a day if the nuisance taxes are not enacted before June 30.

Bill Would Close Airport Highway

With all District airport legislation apparently blocked for this session, Representative McSwain, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, yesterday introduced a resolution to close Military road for the benefit of Washington Airport.

Closing of the road has been advocated previously in bills linked with the proposed leasing or purchase of the Washington Airport by the District and Federal Governments.

All pilots and aviation experts testifying before recent District airport hearings have called the road a menace to flying.

Under the bill the road would be leased at $1 a year to the owners of the Washington Airport providing the latter field is enlarged to include the old Hoover field. Another road to take the place of Military road will be required.

Col. House Sure Party Will Rename Roosevelt

Manchester, Mass., June 18 (AP).—Col. Edward M. House, elder statesman of the Wilson Administration, who four years ago successfully forecast the nomination and election of President Roosevelt, today predicted Roosevelt's renomination.

He declined, however, to predict the outcome of the 1936 election.

Back to the North Shore summer colony, in which he has lived for more than 25 years, House, who on July 26 will celebrate his seventy-seventh birthday, declared on his arrival that there could be no question about the President's renomination.

D. C. Justices to Change Courts Next Autumn

Assignments of several of the Justices of the District Supreme Court will be changed, beginning with the fall term of court, Chief Justice A. A. Wheat announced yesterday.

The criminal courts will be cared for by Justices Daniel W. O'Donoghue and F. D. Letts, and the equity courts by Justices Oscar R. Luhring, Jesse C. Adkins, and Jennings Bailey. The latter will also sit as a District Court judge. Justices James M. Proctor, Joseph W. Cox, and Peyton Gordon will sit in the law courts.

Norris Means Fight on Supreme Court Plan; Morgenthau Smiles Over Aid to France.

By Raymond Clapper

WHEN veteran George Norris, who has spent his long life amending things, brings out an amendment, it means a fight has begun.

This time he proposes to prevent the Supreme Court from ruling acts of Congress unconstitutional except by more than a two-thirds vote, instead of a bare five-to-four majority, as is now the rule.

Norris is the demon amender of them all. As a young man in the House of Representatives, he led the fight which overthrew the iron rule of Speaker Joe Cannon. He put through the lame-duck amendments abolishing the short sessions of Congress and changing the dates of presidential inaugurations and the convening of Congress. In Nebraska, after everyone in the State thought it was impossible, he changed the State constitution to abolish the two-house Legislature and set up a small, unicameral, nonpartisan law-making body.

Now he is taking on the Supreme Court. One purpose of his proposal is to give Congress the benefit of the doubt when the nine justices are so uncertain that five decide one way and four the other. His theory is that if nine men divide so evenly on a question, Congress should have the benefit of the doubt. If more than two-thirds agree that it is unconstitutional, then Uncle George says that's fair enough.

Another feature of his proposal is equally important. He would permit the court to override an act of Congress only if the decision comes within six months after the law takes effect. Also—and this is important—all cases involving constitutional questions would go direct to the Supreme Court instead of being first decided in the lower courts.

That would do two things. First, it would prevent the long intervals such as occurred when NRA was thrown out almost two years after it went into operation. TVA and AAA, now two years old, are still to be judged. If a thing is to be thrown out, do it immediately, not after all of the damage has been done, after people have been thrown in jail or after millions of dollars have been spent on dams and power plants, as in the case of TVA.

Second, it would take the lower courts out of the picture. Without reflecting on individual judges, anyone who stops to think can appreciate the confusion of having a little judge in one place say TVA is constitutional and another judge in another place say it is not, leaving it in complete uncertainty while the wheels of justice grind slowly toward the nine supreme judges at Washington. This would rob a number of district judges of the chance for national attention which comes when they bang an act of Congress over the head. But that is not too great a price to pay to obtain prompt, orderly and final justice at one stroke instead of after several possibly false starts.

It is a revolutionary proposal all right and Senator Norris will find plenty of sound students of the law shooting at his old gray head. Lucky for him that Chief Justice John Marshall wrote a certain letter which can be used in mitigation of his own heresy. Marshall wrote it just a year after his famous decision in Marbury vs. Madison, in which the Court applied the principle of annulling acts of Congress. Justice Chase was involved in an impeachment proceeding based on the charge that he had been a kind of judicial dictator. Marshall, writing Chase, suggested that it might be better to concede to Congress a veto of court decisions.

"A reversal of those legal opinions deemed unsound by the Legislature would certainly better comport with the mildness of our character than the removal of the judge who rendered them, unknowing of his faults," Marshall wrote.

Norris isn't going nearly that far. He only asks that when the court challenges Congress, it have a case strong enough to win the support of two-thirds of its own members.

Strange political sequence:

May 30. Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau secretly uses equalization fund to bolster up French franc and save European gold bloc from collapse. Secretly informs Republican Senate Leader McNary and Chairman Pittman of Senate Foreign Relations Committee of action.

June 10. Republican Grass Roots Conference at Springfield, Ill., denounces secret use of treasury stabilization fund "to speculate in foreign currencies without any accounting until after the next election."

June 16. Usually secretive governor of Bank of France suddenly becomes loquacious, discloses Morgenthau's role and expresses gratitude for help in saving the gold standard.

June 17. Morgenthau, without surprise or resentment at this disclosure of a high state secret, smilingly confirms it and modestly says it was only "an act of common decency among nations."

Very little English is being used in the conversations between the British and the United States over the latest Japanese encroachment in China. Every time Japan does anything these Anglo-American conversations start up. Once, when the Japanese went into Manchuria, then Secretary of State Stimson took the conversations seriously. He climbed out on a limb and declared Japan had violated her treaty obligation. Japan merely sat tight and grinned. Britain melted away discreetly into the background. The United States was left alone in the soy bean fields looking completely silly.

That's why we haven't very much to say now that Japan is getting down close to real British interests in China where something more important than theoretically sacred treaties is involved.

A report is loose that Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia will, on July 4, appear in his customary red suspenders and announce himself as a Jeffersonian Democrat who is willing, if necessary, to become President of the United States.

* * *

There's a storm supposed to be brewing over the Government's political silver policy which to date has made trouble for every silver using country in the world and failed to satisfy the silver bloc which it was intended to appease.

The Japanese ruined one man's vacation by marching into Peiping when they did. Dr. Stanley Hornbeck, the State Department's Far Eastern expert, was out West on a motor trip when the trouble broke. He is still in Colorado with ten days driving ahead of him before he can get back to Washington and tell the State Department what to do.

Mrs. Ringling Loses Fight to Recover Loan

New York, June 18 (AP).—Refusing to believe that Mrs. Emily Buck Ringling was so unsophisticated as to be frightened by the "boasts" of John Ringling, her husband, Supreme Court Justice Peter Schmuck today denied her plea for immediate repayment of a $50,000 loan made the circus magnate in 1930.

Justice Schmuck also summarily found against her in her action to invalidate an agreement whereby she had relinquished her dower rights to the Ringling museum in Sarasota, Fla.

Mrs. Ringling brought the suit to recover at once on a note for $50,000, made out by Ringling on receipt of a loan just before their wedding in 1930. In her action, she claimed Ringling threatened her with divorce and loss of social prestige unless she renewed the instrument for four years in 1933.

Ickes Suggests Plan to Expand Works Budget

Addition of PWA Funds Held Means of Putting More in Jobs.

subsistence wage scale fixed by the President.

However, the question has been raised as to whether there will be a great difference between the total paid a man during a year on an hourly basis and the total paid in a year on the subsistence basis. On an hourly basis wages are paid only for the time worked, while the subsistence scales call for monthly salaries which would not stop if work were prevented by weather or by any other contingency beyond the control of the worker.

In the entire list of 72 projects, only four types of work fall within or near the $1,100 limit. These are rural road and highway work, work on locks, surveying and mapping, and plant pest and disease control.

Cost Analyzed.

Grouped under general heads, the cost per man per year, according to PWA experience, follows:

Streets and highways, $2,132; sewer projects, $1,903; water systems, $2,729; garbage and rubbish disposal, $2,407; gas plants, $1,943; electric distributing systems, $2,854; communications, $3,052; educational buildings, $2,915; municipal buildings, $3,268.

Residential construction, $3,051; housing projects, $2,409; flood control, $2,176; water navigation aids, $2,916; vessels, $3,053; engineering structures (bridges, etc.), $2,279.

Ickes figured that if this type of projects should be financed on a 45 per cent grant basis, the expenditure from the works fund would amount to an average of $959 per man.

Ickes expressed his belief that the housing program, a directly financed Federal project, would go through, although he pointed out that the allotment of $249,000,000 for this purpose still was awaiting the signature of the President.

A strained situation between the works progress division and PWA was becoming more obvious. Ickes said he would not answer "such an academic question" as to whether there would be anything substantial to show for the works expenditures at the end of the year in which the money is to be spent. He denied rumors that he would resign.

Berry Issue Flares.

The situation was not helped by the revelation that Hopkins had hired, as works progress administrator for Tennessee, Harry S. Berry, who was fired by Ickes as Tennessee PWA engineer on November 9, 1933. In discharging Berry, Ickes made public a circular letter Berry is alleged to have written to various State and city officials indicating that they would not be expected to pay back PWA loans.

According to the letter that was made public at the time Berry was removed, he is alleged to have said: "My personal opinion is that the progressive community that is willing to cooperate with President Roosevelt will receive a rich reward and that the 'buck passers and balky horses' will get what they deserve—nothing."

Berry was among the works administrators, who gathered Monday to hear a warning in the President's office against playing politics.

Meanwhile, C. B. Baldwin, chief assistant to Undersecretary Tugwell, head of the rural resettlement division, indicated that there may be no new subsistence homestead projects. He indicated, however, that those already under way would be continued. Incidentally, the only funds received by Tugwell from the works relief appropriation are for administrative expenses. The $100,000,000 actually earmarked for the rural work has not been transferred.

State works progress administrators were told that local and district offices will be set up to report statistical facts concerning unemployment and works progress. For statistical purposes the country will be divided into ten areas.

Work Allotments Of $318,546 Asked

Library of Congress Seeks $57,380 Fund.

The Division of Applications and Information of the works program yesterday announced applications for allotments totaling $318,546, most of which would be spent in the District of Columbia.

The Library of Congress asked for $57,380 to check, list and index millions of books, charts, manuscripts and musical compositions. The General Land Office of the Department of Interior asked for $44,860 to hire additional workers to index public land claims.

The Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce asked for $50,000 to improve its driveways and grounds, and the Securities and Exchange Commission applied for $166,306 to tabulate material that has been filed with it, the work to be done here and in New York.

Contract Is Awarded For Annex to Library

The annex of the Library of Congress will be built by the Consolidated Engineering Co., Inc., of Baltimore, which yesterday was awarded the contract on a low bid of $6,269,400, it was announced by Capitol Architect David Lynn.

The building will be built adjacent to the Folger Shakespeare library. It will extend from Second to Third street and from B street southeast to the Folger Library.

The building will be of five floors and will cover an area 406 feet long and 228 feet wide. The exterior will be modern in treatment of the Italian Renaissance.

SEC Conducts Futile Search For Oil Broker

By the Associated Press.

A fruitless search for J. Edward Jones, prominent oil securities dealer, marked an attempt by the Securities Commission yesterday to get his testimony on alleged inaccuracies by him in an application to sell one of his issues.

A United States marshal and two process servers checked Washington hotels to serve a subpena personally in place of the one mailed to him last week, which he answered by appearance of counsel yesterday.

H. I. Fischbach was the counsel but apparently was not a satisfactory substitute. He tried to withdraw Jones' application, but the commission would not permit, and he thereupon contended that the hearing was illegal, insisting on his right to withdraw.

Virtually no testimony was taken regarding the securities, as Commission Examiner William Green periodically recessed and reconvened the hearing while waiting for Fischbach or Jones. Fischbach had indicated he would return, although he stuck by his previous statement that the commission was without an issue. A week from Thursday has been set for Jones' appearance.

Judge John J. Burns, chief SEC counsel, argued that hte commission could not permit withdrawal of application "under the gun," and Examiner Green accepted this position in refusing Fischbach permission to read a statement explaining the withdrawal, characterizing it as a "stump speech."

At another commission hearing, testimony was taken concerning the reorganization of Paramount-Publix Corporation, now Paramount Pictures, Inc. It is one of several studies being made of reorganizations in response to congressional orders to the commission for recommendations on this problem. Most of the testimony was of a background nature.

Boy Injured by Automobile.

Gene Tyler, 5, suffered a broken right leg and possible internal injuries last night when he was struck by an automobile while playing in front of his home in the 400 block of L street northwest. He was treated at Sibley Hospital. Police said the automobile was driven by A. M. Goodson, of the 7600 block of Georgia avenue northwest.

Bill to Insure AAA's Legality Voted by House

istration's new liquor control bill, setting up a new Federal alcohol control administration under the Treasury Department, prescribing a $10 occupational tax for the distilled spirits, wines and malt beverage industries, and regulating the liquor business through a system of permits.

3. Seeking to smash the Military Affairs Committee deadlock over TVA legislation, Chairman John J. McSwain introduced a compromise bill, validating authority of the Tennessee Valley Authority to sell power on a large scale, but bringing TVA under rigid General Accounting Office supervision, limiting its bond issuing authority to $50,000,000 and prohibiting purchase of private power distribution systems for resale to States or municipalities.

4. Assuring early disposition of the social security bill, the Senate agreed to vote at 1 p. m. today on the Clark amendment, exempting retirement systems of private companies from compulsory participation in the Federal old age pension plans. After 1 o'clock, debate will be limited to 10 minutes on each amendment, and 15 minutes on the bill.

5. The House Interstate Commerce Committee scheduled a meeting today to receive subcommittee reports on the Administration's utility holding company bill. Reports persisted that the Senate's drastic holding company "death sentence" section has been materially modified, despite the President's request that it pass. An alternative proposal for squeezing out "unnecessary" holding units is said to have been drafted.

Eccles Bill Obstacle.

The Eccles bank bill, still snagged in a Senate banking sub-committee, remained the only serious obstacle in the path of the Administration's optimistic early adjournment hopes. The conservative opposition yesterday claimed enough votes to strike out Title II, increasing the Federal Reserve Board's control over credit and banking. Talk of abandoning the title for this session was revived yesterday.

The AAA amendments, whipped through the House without even a record vote or any important changes after less than two days' debate, will receive fuller consideration in the Senate, where there is a well-organized opposition.

Designed to bring the farm set-up into line with the Supreme Court's Schechter case decision, the bill abandons the old licensing system, but authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to order marketing agreements for handlers of milk, tobacco, certain fruits and nuts and turpentine if half of the handlers or two-thirds of the farmers are willing. Milk purchased wholesale in interstate commerce would be subject to price-fixing.

Granary Plan Included.

Sandwiched into the measure is Secretary Wallace's "ever normal granary" plan for holding surplus farm produce in fat years to make cash benefit payments in years of short production. The old McNary-Haugen principle is revived in another section, authorizing use of 30 per cent of the preceding year's customs receipts to encourage foreign and domestic consumption of American farm produce and to retire submarginal land. The President may fix quotas or compensating taxes on imports adversely affecting domestic farm prices.

Suits to recover processing taxes would be barred by the bill, while processing taxes would be written into the law at existing rates, with the Secretary of Agriculture given power to raise or lower them. Should this last delegation of power be ruled unconstitutional, taxes would be frozen at existing levels.

Other provisions of the bill enable the Secreatry of Agriculture to examine books, income tax data and records of parties to marketing agreements, extending the Jones-Costigan sugar quota act from May 9, 1937, to December 31, 1937, and permit crop control to move up or down by substituting "adjustment" for "reduction."

Amendment Barrier.

Senate passage of the social security bill appears probable today, following a close vote in the early afternoon on the Clark amendment—the one serious remaining hurdle. Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), Missouri, is sponsor of the amendment, which would exempt from the Federal tax employers and employes now benefited from private retirement systems.

Clark, who contends that efficiently operated company retirement systems are generally more liberal than the plan provided in the bill, received strong support from conservative Democrats, including Senators Walter F. George, of Georgia; Millard E. Tydings, of Maryland, and William H. King, of Utah.

George, who questioned the constitutionality of the entire program, argued:

"Those who stand against this amendment want to put the Federal Government in control of pensioning the people of the country. They want to centralize power here. They want to socialize and federalize this Nation in all of its affairs. Otherwise they would accept the amendment."

Question Legality.

Administration Senators, including Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, and Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, co-author of the bill, contended the bill as now drafted is constitutional, but the Clark amendment might lay it open to overthrow by the courts.

Leaders plan to call up the Guffey coal bill, providing for regulation of the soft coal industry under a miniature NRA set-up, as soon as the social security bill is disposed of. The House Ways and Means Committee meanwhile rushed hearings on the Guffey measure, which is high on the Administration's list of "must" bills.

Board Named To Arbitrate Omaha Strike

By the Associated Press.

Omaha, Nebr., June 18.—Gov. R. L. Cochran's demand for arbitration of the Omaha street car strike today was approved by both strikers and the Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Railway Co. The city has been under martial law since Saturday as a result of riots in connection with the strike.

Street cars that disappeared like magic from the streets yesterday when the company failed to meet the Governor's demand for appointment of an arbitrator by a specified hour, reappeared with the same swiftness after acceptance of the arbitration demand.

Within an hour after making his announcement, Cochran had completed the arbitration board. Hurrying to the Governor's headquarters, Ernest Bowerman, choice of the strikers, and Sam Reynolds, choice of the company, immediately agreed to let the Governor select a third man. Cochran named John J. Ledwith, of Lincoln.

Ledwith is a lawyer, Reynolds is a businessman and Bowerman is secretary of the Omaha Central Labor Union. The three expect to hold their first session tomorrow. Both sides have agreed to accept the decision of the board.

Slayer of Woman Gets 20-Year Term

Wm. Dudley Waives Trial by Jury at Richmond.

Richmond, Va., June 18 (AP).—William A. Dudley, 40, was sentenced today to serve 20 years in the State penitentiary for second-degree murder as a result of the slaying of Mrs. Georgia Martin here on Easter Sunday morning.

The sentence was imposed by Judge John Ingram in Hustings Court following a hearing at which Dudley pleaded not guilty and waived trial by jury.

Witnesses said Dudley, a boarder in the home where Mrs. Martin lived, went into her room and slashed her throat with a razor during an argument. Dudley, they said, then ran into the kitchen and tried to take his own life in the same manner.

Mutinous Convicts Set Blaze In Prison Coal Mine in Kansas

Guard O. M. Johnson drove them back with tear gas and the convicts seized 11 guards.

Three guards were sent down the air shaft to assist Johnson. The rush upon the gun cage came shortly after noon.

After Warden Simpson was apprised of the reason for the mutiny he telephoned the board of administration at Topeka for instructions.

The guards held as hostages are Nathan Van Meter, John Heaslop, Levi Day, Milt Gould, James Skahan, John Edwards, Gabe Kamershack, Dave White, James Wilson, Joseph Studdard, Frank Sawaski, with Superintendent Murray.

The first mutiny in the mine started on July 11, 1926, when convicts barricaded themselves at the 720-foot level for 36 hours and came out without receiving concessions.

Parole Grievance Ignored.

One of the most bitterly fought mutinies in prison history occurred a year later. On that occasion leaders of the hunger strike held their forces intact for 76 hours before the rank and file of 300 haggard and hungry men rebelled and came out for food.

On April 7, 1928, a $250,000 fire, set by three trusties, swept the mine.

Until the parole law was changed by the last Legislature, prisoners could obtain reduction of their sentences by doing more than their minimum quota of work in the mine. Under the old rule a prisoner's allotment was 9 tons of coal a week and for every ton above that he was allowed 50 cents or a day off his sentence.

Discontent among the prisoner-miners became apparent this spring after this privilege was removed by passage of a law which held that prisoners must serve at least two-thirds of their sentences before being subject to parole.

This known grievance, however, was not mentioned by the warden as one of the causes of the present mutiny.

Over Dozen Are Felled As Fire Rages 2 Hours

New Orleans, June 18 (AP).—A stubborn fire which started at noon in the thirteenth floor storeroom of the Maison Blanche building, housing one of the city's largest department stores, was brought under control late today after more than a dozen firemen and a civilian had been overcome by smoke and fumes.

The loss, largely covered by insurance, will run into many thousands of dollars.

An hour and a half after the blaze had been discovered Fire Chief John M. Evans said the flames were under control, but a few minutes later the building's water supply failed as a standpipe burst. The flames raged unchecked for 30 minutes while firemen constructed hose lines from the street 13 floors below.

Press Club Post Outing.

The annual outing of the National Press Club Post, No. 20, of the American Legion will be held the first week in September, after members of the group have returned from their vacations, it was decided yesterday. Named on a committee to select a place for the outing were Soterios Nicholson, Richard W. Westwood and Nathan D. Goldberg.

McComas, Wade Named on Board

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 18.—The new three-member State Conservation Commission was organized today when Gov. Harry W. Nice appointed former State Senator Henry W. McComas, of Oakland, and Dr. J. Hubert Wade, of Boonsboro, associate members, to serve with former Judge Robert T. Duer, Princess Anne, chairman. Judge Duer was appointed several weeks ago.

The Governor also said he had requested the commission to appoint Frank Bentz, Hagerstown, as chief clerk to fill the vacancy caused by the death of H. H. Johnson.

Joseph A. Wilmer, of La Plata, former Republican floor leader in the House of Delegates, was appointed to the State Survey Commission, vice Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, chairman, resigned. J. Cookman Boyd was appointed chairman. Boyd and Isaac Lobe Strauss were appointed to the commission some time ago.

Vancouver Mob Of Dock Hands Battles Police

By the Associated Press.

Vancouver, B. C., June 18.—Bitter street battling between police and longshoremen broke out today, an hour after 1,000 strikers and sympathizers were driven from the entrance to Ballantyne Pier by police fighting from behind a barrage of tear gas bombs.

Strikers were broken up into groups and the rioting staged over an area of eight city blocks as police pursued them into alleys, yards and into buildings.

Bloody-faced strikers fought with rocks and other weapons and here and there policemen were knocked down and beaten.

As soon as police overcame resistance at one point, it broke out at another, individual constables on foot, especially suffering.

Crowds in the area were growing and fresh police reinforcements were brought up.

Injunction Filed In Roads Dispute

Commissioners Must Show Cause in Firing.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, June 18.—The board of County filed a bill for an injunction against the State roads commission today calling on the commission to show cause why Joseph Richards was removed June 1 as roads supervisor of Cecil County. Supervisors of Washington and Frederick counties were removed at the same time.

Dr. Homer L. Tabor, chairman of the State roads commission, said here that he welcomed the suit and that it would decide future cases and the meaning of Chapter 425, Acts of 1923.

Dr. Tabor added that the suit would direct the future action of the roads commission in regard to appointments.

Sweitzer Indictment In Chicago Reported

Chicago, June 18 (AP).—Robert M. Sweitzer, veteran Democratic leader, whose removal from the post of county treasurer stirred political circles, was reported to have been indicted by the Cook County grand jury today on charges of withholding public funds.

The county board ousted Sweitzer two weeks ago when he failed to meet its ultimatum that he restore an alleged $414,129 shortage in the county clerk's office.

Bonds were reported set at $10,000 on a charge involving a penalty of one to ten years imprisonment in event of conviction. It was understood the true bills would be returned tomorrow.

2 'Kid' Kidnapers Face Chair, or Life

Sheriff Would Much Prefer to 'Paddle Their Pants Off.'

By the Associated Press.

Jasper, Ind., June 18.—Sheriff Ed Leugers would "paddle the pants" of the two West Virginia "kids" who kidnaped him, but their pleas of guilty today to kidnaping indictments made them liable to punishment by death or life imprisonment.

Judge John L. Sumner deferred sentencing the lads pending word from their Huntington homes as to their exact ages. One of the boys, Bascum Ray, jr., says he is 14 while the other, Maurice Sheridan, gives his age as 17 years.

Indictment of the boys this afternoon and their court arraignment came within 24 hours of their capture near Boonville by possemen who wounded young Ray in the right shoulder. It was near that city, Sheriff Leugers said, that the boys released him shackled with his own handcuffs after kidnaping him from in front of his jail at Jasper. He had arrested them, he said, when he found them in a car containing bootleg liquor.

Heads of Closed Bank Sued in Deposit Loss

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., June 18.—Testimony in a suit in the circuit court in which Eugene Zimmerman, of Baltimore, seeks to hold Emory L. Coblentz, president, and Newton A. Fulton, an official of the closed Central Trust, responsible for the loss of a deposit of $27,343.49, was taken before Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Judge Arthur D. Willard yesterday. The judges set Monday for argument.

Zimmerman inherited the sum from his grandfather, the late Cephus M. Thomas, of Walkersville, and under an order of the court it was deposited in the Walkersville Savings Bank, a branch of the trust company. Coblentz and Fulton were named by Thomas as executors of his will. Miss Madeline Thomas, a granddaughter of Thomas and also a legatee, became of age while the money was intact and received $23,217. Zimmerman became of age after the Central Trust Co. closed September 2, 1931. The previous year the trust company took over the Walkersville bank.

Society to Hold Picnic On St. Clement's Isle

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., June 18.—Arrangements have been completed by Mrs. Frank J. Parran, president of the Colonial Dames of Southern Maryland, for a picnic at St. Clement's Island Sunday.

It was on this island in the Potomac River off Kopels Point that the Maryland colonists first landed in 1634. They were advised by Henry Fleet, a trader, to make their settlement further down the river. So, after holding a mass in thanksgiving for their safe arrival, they sailed back again to St. Marys River and made their settlement, later to be known as St. Marys City, Maryland's first capital.

Mitchell Gives Detail of 'Graft' In Senate Today

To Tell Committee of Deal for $1,700,000 Leviathan Offset.

lia of waste, inefficiency, unearned exorbitant salaries and bonuses and other forms of so-called compensation, corrupting expense accounts, exploitation of the public by the sale and manipulation of stock, the values of which are largely based on the hope of profit from robbing the taxpayer."

The committee in its report did not deal with the charges regarding the laying-up of the Leviathan, but it pointed out what it called the "corporate web" of the International Mercantile Marine, the Vincent Astor-Kermit Roosevelt company, which in turn owns the United States Lines, operator of the Leviathan.

The report pointed out that the Roosevelt Steamship Co., subsidiary of the International Mercantile Marine, collected from United States Lines approximately 19 per cent of gross voyage revenue (excluding mail) of vessels owned and controlled by United States Lines.

"Commissions thus received by the Roosevelt Steamship Co. totaled $3,097,537 between December 8, 1931, and December 31, 1933," the report stated. "Of this amount, $2,712,055 was paid by the Roosevelt Steamship Co. to the International Mercantile Marine. During the same period the books of the United States Lines show a purported loss of $1,886,379."

Mr. Mitchell's charges of "dry rot" and inefficiency in the steamboat inspection service of the Commerce Department are also of interest to the Senate Commerce Committee, which is now engaged in investigating the Morro Castle and Mohawk disasters. The ousted assistant secretary yesterday promised to elaborate his original charge that the inefficiency in the steamboat inspection service may have contributed to the Morro Castle disaster.

At all events, the iMtchell charges have served to concentrate attention on the effoffrts of the Commerce Committee to improve legislation and its administration for safety at sea. As Mr. Mitchell was charging inefficiency against steamboat inspection, J. B. Weaver, present head of that service, was telling the Commerce Committee's "technical committee on safety at sea" that there were 160 vessels plying inland waters as unsafe as the General Slocum which burned in 1904 in the East River with the loss of 1,021 lives. This, however, was not a criticism of administration of existing laws, but of the inadequacy of present legislation.

Roper Invited to Hearing.

The Commerce Committee unanimously voted to "summon" Mr. Mitchell to appear today and at the same "invited" Secretary Roper to be present. Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the committee, said that when the committee met Mr. Mitchell would be asked "to tell his story."

What he tells will shape the remainder of the inquiry, Senator Copeland asserted. He said Mitchell would be cross-examined after he made any statement he wished and the committee would then decide whether other witnesses should be called. It is doubtful whether Mitchell will complete "his story" at today's session, unless the committee sits all day.

Several Republican members of the committee are determined to force a thorough investigation if the charges made by Mr. Mitchell contain any substance or show the need for further evidence. Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, for one, takes the view that Mr. Mitchell is a responsible person and that his charges should be regarded seriously.

Johnson Confirmed.

The committee voted, 18 to 5, to confirm the nomination of John Monroe Johnson as the successor to Mr. Mitchell, the adverse votes being cast by Senators Hiram Johnson, of California; Charles L. McNary, of Oregon; Vandenberg, Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, and Wallace H. White, of Maine, all Republicans.

"t should be said," asserted Senator Copeland in announcing the vote, "that there was absolutely no opposition personally to Mr. Johnson. Those voting against his nomination made that plain. The adverse votes represented a difference of opinion as to procedure. Those voting against him wished to defer action on the nomination until Mr. Mitchell's charges were investigated."

Mr. Mitchell held his press conference at which he gave it out his most recent letter to the President before the Copeland committee acted. He said he planned a series of perss conferences and said he thought one called for 4:30, today 'would be good."

Voices Surprise at Ouster.

In his letter to the President Mr. Mitchell said he would not challenge the right of the President to remove an executive officer but that he was surprised he was ousted without being given a hearing, which he repeatedly had requested.

He points out that, although the reason given for his removal was to open the way for the appointment of a man of administrative attainments, he had been "thrice" urged to take an important post in the RFC. He subsequently revealed that he also was offered two other positions by the Administration, one being Minister to Romania.

As for the contention that a man with knowledge of transportation conditions was needed for the post, Mr. Mitchell first pointed out to the President that there was nothing in the Who's Who sketch of Mr. Johnson to show he had such qualifications, and that moreover "you already have a 'transportation expert' in the Department of Commerce," receiving $5,00 annually, but functioning only as "a publicity expert." This man had a $5,000 a year assistant, "who also devotes himself to publicity," said Mr. Mitchell

Refers to St. Clair.

He said he was referring to Labert St. Clair, listed as "transportation assistant" to Secretary Roper, and Mr. St. Clair's assistant, Harry Daniel. It is understood that these two men have superseded the regular press or publicity division of the department.

Mr. Mitchell maintained that the reasons assigned by Mr. Roper for desiring his resignation was "mere camouflage to cover up the real motive," which he held to be that his "aptitudes led me to look into the merits and the lawfulness of the multitude of business transactions that came to me for approval, and when I found that ships costing millions of dollars and in perfect condition were being delivered for scrapping on an illegal contract that millions in mail pay were being squandered without any regard for past due obligations of the contractor to the Government, and other Treasury plundreing transactions were going on without check or hindrance, I refused to approve such racketeering practices."

"Aptitudes along executive lines, as that term is construed in the Commerce Department today, means a willingness to sign on the dotted line without asking any embarassing questions," the letter added.

Puts Issue Up to Roosevelt.

Mr. Mitchell told the President that "it is for you to decide whether transactions such as the offensive Leviathan affair are to be hushed up by saying 'the President has approved,' or whether you will justify the high hopes and expectations of the millions of American citizens who heard you declare that the money changers shall be driven from the temple."

"The New Deal," he added, "is on trial at the bar of public opinion on more than one front."

He said that the "complacency of Secretary Roper was not jarred in the least by the concrete evidences of fraud and illegality in a large number of transactions which I brought to his personal attention." He reiterated some of the details of the Leviathan contract, again naming Vincent Astor and Kermit Roosevelt, intimates of the President, as beneficiaries.

England Signs Pact to Permit Big Reich Navy

35% Ratio Accord Gives Hitler Fleet Matching Italy and France.

friendly attitude toward Germany, and the pact was signed before noon, with Baron Joachim von Ribbentrop, chief of the Reich's delegation, acting for Hitler.

The "white paper's surprise sensation was contained in a passage of Sir Samuel's note to von Ribbentrop on submarines. It said:

"Germany shall have the right to possess a submarine tonnage equal to the total submarine tonnage possessed by members of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

"The German government undertakes, however, except in circumstances indicated immediately in the following sentence, that the German submarine tonnage shall not exceed 45 per cent of the total possessed by the British commonwealth.

"The German government reserves the right, in the event of a situation arising which in their opinion makes it necessary for Germany to exceed this 45 per cent, to give notice to this effect to the United Kingdom; and agree that the matter shall be subjected to friendly discussion before the German government shall exercise that right."

Adjustments Provided For.

The paper, which includes the exchange of German and British notes covering the agreement, reveals that adjustments are to be allowed in this agreement by common accord on any class of warships, provided these adjustments do not result "in any substantial or permanent departure from the 35-100 ratio on total strengths" between Germany and Britain.

Germany's reservation said:

"If the general equilibrium in naval armaments as normally maintained in the past should be upset violently by any abnormal exceptional construction by other powers, the German government reserves the right to invite his majesty's government of the United Kingdom to examine the new situation thus created."

A British spokesman emphasized that the new agreement does not mean Britain condones Germany's breach of the military and naval clauses of the Versailles Treaty ending the World War, but merely takes advantage of this opportunity to confine that breach within the narrowest possible limits.

The Anglo-German parley delegates and experts are to hold one or two further meetings this week to determine the exact German building program and the period over which it shall spread.

Secret Clause Reported.

The Anglo-German agreement also was reliably reported to contain a secret clause whereby Germany is pledged not to build aircraft carriers, temporarily.

Under the 35-100 ratio, the Reich normally would be allowed to construct 44,000 tons of these carriers. Renunciation of this right, however, was regarded as the price Hitler paid for the important British concession of nominal parity in submarines for Germany.

Hitler, however, did not surrender his right to have aircraft carriers indefinitely, but merely for seven years, and a building program to start at the end of that "holiday" already is being arranged.

Britain was concerned about the reaction in Paris and Rome, and Capt. Anthony Eden, arms expert and League of Nations affairs minister, was expected to depart shortly for France to begin conversations on naval questions and the general European situation. It was understood his hurried mission was due to the uproar of indignation the accord evoked in Paris.

England's Pact Stirs French Resentment

By the United Press.

Paris, June 18.—Growing coolness between France and Great Britain over the new Anglo-German naval understanding threatened tonight to break the unity among the former allied powers against Adolf Hitler's rearmament program.

1. Postponement of the 1935 world naval conference.

2. Temporary shelving of the General Western air aid pact, involving Britain, France, Italy, Belgium and possibly Germany.

The French note to London deploring England's new attitude toward Germany revealed the dangerous coolness now existing between the two governments, which adds to the recent estrangement between Britain and Italy over Britain's attitude on the Abyssinian dispute.

The French seemed especially surprised over the apparent change of policy at London from the close cooperation among Britain, Italy and France, sponsored by former Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald.

British Won't Send MacDonald to U. S.

London, June 18 (U.P.).—Officials denied reports that former Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald might be sent to Washington as a special peace envoy to insure cooperation between Britain and America.

Americans earlier had heard "unofficially" that the government intended to send MacDonald to Washington on another good will mission, and said Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin might make a gesture of this sort.

Early Decision Seen In Bookmaking Law

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 18.—An early decision in the effort of Fred Sailes, a former local bookmaker, to have the act of the last General Assembly making bookmaking illegal in Washington County declared invalid, is anticipated following the filing of answers to Sailes' petition by States' Attorney Martin L. Ingram and Sheriff Max Malott. The two officials would be enjoined from prosecuting under the provisions of the anti-bookmaking act.

The officials made a blanket denial of the allegations in Sailes' petition and asked for dismissal of the bill of complaint. Judge Frank G. Wagaman signed an order when Sailes' petition was filed, giving the defendants until June 25 to file answer.

C. E. King Bolts Party to Protest Jobs Division

Fusion Commission Comes Back Into Fold After Parley Is Held.

In a move to secure equal distribution of patronage between Fusion Democrats and Republicans, County Commissioner Charles E. King, Fusion Democrat, yesterday temporarily bolted the part yand voted with the Democratic organization minority to dismiss three Republican members of the county liquor control board and reappoint John C. Walker, organization Democrat, as manager.

King reversed his stand after a conference with Fusion leaders, however, a short time later and agreed to lay the matter on the table until next Tuesday.

"On the new road set-up they have simply ignored the Fusion Democrats," King said last night in explaning his vote. "The proposition I had up was to gain recognition from the Republican State Central Committee which has a scheme up to control everything. They thought they had the thing all worked out secretly. The whole thing was in a position to scalp me, and it is underhanded. I just did not stand for that."

Early Solution Seen.

He expressed the belief, however, that the whole thing would be settled in a few days. "This thing is open until next Tuesday and they will have their chance to lay their cards on the table, and if I do not chose to play with them I do not have to," he added.

Denying any attempt to seize control of the county government by reason of his strategic position on the five-man board, King pointed out that he has voted with his Fusion colleagues from the start. "I have not formed a new coalition," he said. "I am not hoggish about it. I know just exactly how I stand and I do not want anything but what is fair."

King's complaint was that the Republican State central committee is violating a pre-election agreement to divide jobs equally between Fusion Republicans and Democrats. "We had a definite agreement that everything was to be divided equally. I did not feel like $ was getting the proper recognition and I did not want to see everything gobbled up by one side. This is positively going to be worked out an dit is going to come my way, or else."

Surprise Move.

King's surprise move came when he voted with Richard H. Lansdale and Robert D. Hagner, organization Democratic members of the board, to reappoint Walker as manager of the dispensary system and to dismiss Ralph S. Fowler, Jack S. Eaton and Frank W. Dwyer, Fusion appointees of the liquor board. King's vote gave a 3-to-2 majority against Frank H. Karn and Paul Coughlan, Republicans.

Taken back by the suddenness of King's action, Coughlan summoned several party leaders and a hurried conference of Fusion officials took place in the courthouse while the commissioners' meeting was held in abeyance. At the conclusion of the impromptu parley the meeting was resumed and the liquor board motion laid on the table by a 3-2 vote, with King again voting with the Fusion members.

King's position as the lone Fusion Democrat on a board otherwise composed of two Republicans and two organization Democrats gives him a controlling vote on any measure of sufficient partisan nature to cause a division along party lines between Republicans and Democrats. Prior to yesterday's meeting he has voted consistently with the Republican duo and his vote enabled the Fusion Party to control the bulk of the county government.

Noggin of Gin Revives Doe Rescued in Sound

By the Associated Press.

South Yarmouth, Mass., June 18.—A doe, roaming Cape Cod tonight, owed its life to the courage of Mrs. Charles Boma and a brimming noggin of gin.

Mrs. Boma saw the animal struggling feebly in the waters of Nantucket Sound, apparently having just fallen short of negotiating a 14-mile swim from the Island of Nantucket on Marthas Vineyard.

She plunged in and brought the deer ashore, but the animal was unable to stand and appeared on the verge of expiring.

Mrs. Boma rushed into her cottage and returned with a stout ration of gin. The restorative acted so quickly that the deer sprang up and, discribing a zigzag course, vanished in the woods.

A Test Of Statesmanship.

A decision that will pointedly measure the statesmanship of the Senate is expected shortly after that body meets tomorrow. For today is the birthday of a young man who was elected to the Senate while he was ineligible to be seated because of his extreme youth. If the plain language of the Constitution and precedents established by the Senate are followed, Rush D. Holt will be denied a senatorial toga. If political inclinations are followed, the fundamental law will again be ignored and the overwhelming Democratic majority will be strengthened by another vote.

As early as 1793 Albert Gallatin, one of the distinguished statesmen of the post-revolutionary period, was denied a seat in the Senate because he had not been a citizen for nine years. At the time he lacked only eight months of fulfilling the constitutional requirement, but the Senate declared his election was void. In a similar manner James A. Shields was disqualified. His friends, like those of Mr. Holt, urged that consideration of his case should be postponed for a few months until he attained the proper constitutional age in citizenship. But the Senate declared his election void because he had been ineligible "at the commencement of the term for which he was elected."

Under the twentieth amendment to the Constitution the term for which Mr. Holt was elected began last January 3. At that time Mr. Holt was only 29 years of age. The text of both the amendment, prescribing the limits of senatorial terms, and the original Constitution, declaring that "no person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained the age of 30 years," are as plain as language can be. The young man from West Virginia was not eligible to serve when he was elected or when his term began. Consequently, he can not lawfully be admitted as a member of the Senate, unless he is re-elected.

It is being argued that the people of West Virginia elected Mr. Holt and he should, therefore, be permitted to represent his State despite his technical ineligibility. Under such pseudo-reasoning the Constitution would soon be destroyed. The issue before the Senate is clearly drawn between political expediency and adherence to the fundamental law. If Mr. Holt is allowed to take his seat without a thorough and sincere examination of his eligibility, the "greatest deliberative body in the world" will brand itself as a mere political tool.

Made Music.

Washington takes more than just a cultural interest in the affairs of the National Symphony Orchestra. Local residents dig down into their pockets to support it, not only in admissions but in annual contributions. For that reason the current argument as to who shall and who shall not play in the orchestra, which threatens to cancel the summer concerts from barges off Potomac Park, is deplored on every hand.

There is always a clash when art must be considered in terms of dollars. Yet musicians, particularly hard hit by the depression as well as by the radio and moving pictures, must live. One objective of the National Orchestra when it was organized some five years ago was to improve the lot of local musicians. The venture succeeded, however, because every effort was made to insure the highest possible quality in its programs. This implied a restriction of the orchestra personnel to musicians of outstanding ability. Without such performers who could present music that would attract listeners and elicit financial support the orchestra might just as well have disbanded.

Washington as the seat of the Federal Government has long since recognized the futility of "made work" of the leaf-raking variety; the community's musicians must also learn that "made music" would be quite as valueless.

Truly Independent.

"As stubborn as a Burgher of Bern" was a byword throughout the rest of Switzerland when the Bernese Burghers bossed it. Ever since then, "As stubborn as a Swiss" has been a byword throughout the rest of Europe. Now the Federal Council of Switzerland has again voted down a resolution for the establishment of diplomatic and commercial relations with Moscow.

To just such "stubbornness" has the brave little confederation always owed much of its prosperity and all of its freedom. Like the signers of our own Declaration of Independence, its people, surrounded by greedy neighbors, have had, in Franklin's phrase, to hang together if they didn't want to hang separately. Their position has made them jealous of their right to independence of thought and action.

And nothing has ever succeeded in making them see any inconsistency in any course which left that right free to function. It has been argued that national sovereignty is jeopardized by membership in the League of Nations. Yet, here is Switzerland, a country so mistrustful of communism as to shun diplomatic and commercial understandings with Russia—and at the same time not only housing at Geneva the League to which the Soviets belong, but itself belonging to that League.

The Mitchell Charges.

A really extraordinary document is the letter written to President Roosevelt by Ewing Y. Mitchell concerning his dismissal from the office of Assistant Secretary of Commerce. Its sincerity and honesty of purpose are unquestionable. But seldom does a man so clearly condemn himself as unqualified for administrative office as does Mr. Mitchell in this rambling tirade.

It is clear that the President's famous promise to "drive the money changers from the temple" found fertile soil in Mr. Mitchell's mind. But the application he has given to the expression is farcical. The classic contours of the Department of Commerce building perhaps explain why it should be viewed as "the temple." But to convey the impression that everyone who is not a Farley appointee is a "money changer" is strong even for this day of self-conscious Democratic rectitude.

"I have repeatedly urged Secretary Roper," Mr. Mitchell writes the President, "to appoint some New Dealers to key positions in those bureaus . . . but up to date and after more than two years of your Administration, in the Bureau of Lighthouses and the Coast and Geodetic Survey . . . not one single member of our party has been appointed to a key position."

That Mr. Mitchell should single out these two bureaus for attack is very suggestive. Both of them are headed by highly qualified technicians of a type all too rare in our Federal bureaucracy. George R. Putnam entered the government service in 1890 and has been Commissioner of Lighthouses since 1910, serving in this office through both the Wilson Administrations. Raymond S. Patton joined the Coast and Geodetic Survey in 1904 and has been director of this bureau for the past six years. Both of these men enjoyed international scientific reputations when Mr. Mitchell was unknown outside of Missouri politics. But because they were not "New Dealers" the former Assistant Secretary of Commerce would seemingly have had them fired.

None deny Mr. Mitchell's assertion that he took the Department of Commerce position reluctantly. For it was generally understood that what he really wanted as reward for services at the Chicago convention was a diplomatic post. Indeed, Bucharest and Dublin used to be mentioned in connection with his name when Mr. Mitchell came to Washington to subject himself to the strain of nobly resisting appointment to office. None deny that Mr. Mitchell has worked indefatigably these past two years to drive out "money changers" and harry "racketeers." But his unfortunate predisposition to place all who are not spoilsmen in these categories has greatly weakened the strongest point in his indictment of the Department of Commerce, which is the alteration of contract with the United States Lines in order to lay up the Leviathan.

Even here Mr. Mitchell's case seems relatively rather than absolutely strong. The Senate Commerce Committee has properly ordered a probe of the charges, and it is the more desirable that they be examined because of their bearing on the whole issue of shipping subsidies. But in advance of detailed inquiry it may be noted that the Leviathan was laid up during the 1933 season; that she lost approximately $100,000 each round trip last summer; that she is regarded in shipping circles as antiquated and in some respects unsafe, and that enforcement of the original contract against the United States Lines would very likely bankrupt that company and load the Government with vessels for which no profitable employment could be found.

The Mitchell charges are indirectly constructive in showing that in the Department of Commerce, at least, there is some effective resistance to the patronage racket. They are useful in drawing attention to the desirability of a realistic consideration of our ship subsidy policy. But as political ammunition against the Administration they are valuable only as further evidence of how casually, clumsily and crudely the so-called "planned economy" is being operated by patronage appointees.

Impractical Suggestions.

Because of the prominent part Senator Norris has played in sponsoring constitutional amendments he logically assumes leadership of the movement to curb the powers of the Supreme Court. Now the Senator has introduced a resolution providing that acts of Congress be set aside as unconstitutional only upon a two-thirds vote within the court; that the period in which statutes may be thus upset be limited to six months, and that the Supreme Court be given original and exclusive jurisdiction in cases involving a constitutional issue.

Under the present arrangement each member of the court is free to express his own conclusions. As a practical matter, however, five or more of the justices usually concur in a single opinion. If a two-thirds vote should be required to sustain a point of unconstitutionality, more extensive compromises would have to be made in the writing of opinions. But the mental processes of the court would remain the same, and the actual result would be to replace the present 5-to-4 divisions by a 6-to-3 line-up. If the court should divide 5 to 4 under the Norris formula, however, the legal contestant winning the majority support might lose his case, which would seem to be an obvious injustice.

Senator Norris presents his arguments as if the court sat in judgment upon acts of Congress, pronouncing them either valid or invalid. Actually the court reviews lawsuits and convictions appealed to it from lower tribunals. If the court finds, in making its decision, that an act of Congress is incompatible with the Constitution it brushes aside the statute and lets the fundamental law stand in that particular case. To provide that cases submitted within six months after passage of an act might be decided on constitutional grounds, while all later cases could not turn upon such an issue, would be an arbitrary encroachment upon the spirit as well as the letter of the Constitution.

With regard to the proposal to give the Supreme Court original jurisdiction in all cases involving a constitutional issue, it is only necessary to note that nine justices would probably find it impossible to handle so much litigation. Indeed, not one of the proposals made by Senator Norris appears to have been thought through. He might better have published his casual suggestions as such, instead of incorporating them in a formal resolution.

Stabilizing Confusion.

"There is opportunity now," says the current report of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, "to replace temporary measures appropriate only to extraordinary conditions, with an agricultural policy looking toward long-view objectives." These are encouraging words. Modification of the AAA program has come to be recognized as absolutely essential to restoration of agricultural stability on a basis that will afford employment for the present farm population.

In writing his report Administrator Davis was undoubtedly aware of the apprehension growing out of the destruction of crops, loss of foreign markets, etc. To allay these fears he promises that "restricted production will not be the focal point of a permanent policy for agriculture." Then follows this significant statement:

> Lasting improvement in the welfare of farmers is necessarily bound up with increased production and consumption of agricultural products. A long-view policy for agriculture, therefore, can not passively accept the present limited purchasing power for food and fiber products of large numbers of our people, nor conceive future production on that basis.

From this recital it appears that the Administration recognizes the mistakes of the AAA and is attempting to correct them. Yet the House has just passed a Department of Agriculture bill extending the powers of the AAA and making its administration less conducive to change. If "restricted production" is no longer the aim of the New Deal why are the processing taxes being written into law and why is the definition of parity being modified so that still greater adjustments will be necessary to attain it, if such attainment is at all possible?

Still another objective in the so-called "long view policy" is the removal of "barriers that now constrict international trade." Yet the proposed amendments would set up a $100,000,000 fund to subsidize exports, among other purposes. Clearly it is the intention of the AAA to overcome the handicaps which its own policies have imposed on American products in the world market by dumping surpluses abroad. That practice inevitably leads to the erection of new protective barriers in other countries and to foreign subsidies to counteract our own.

To make the cycle of inconsistency complete, the amendments would also permit the executive restriction of imports that threaten the success of the farm program. While officials are solemnly talking about intelligent agricultural planning for the future, their spokesmen on Capitol Hill are thus preparing the way for the maintenance of artificial prices, the restriction of imports and the dumping of exports abroad. With this bill, the agricultural policy goes beyond experimentation to a confused scramble for temporary gains, regardless of principles expounded for public effect, and with little thought for the ultimate welfare of the farmer.

No Jean Valjean.

If it had been pastry baking and not baseball that "Alabama" Pitts had been prevented from entering on his release from Sing Sing, public opinion should have cried out as indignantly, though the publicity would undoubtedly have been less.

Over a long course of years society has been experimenting in the always unsavory business of controlling those who are unable to or who refuse to live up to the necessary rules and regulations. From belief in brutal castigation and the indelible stigma, attitudes generally have swung over to the point of admitting the greater efficacy of preventive crime control and, that failing, incarceration with a hope for reform. One of the most outstanding exponents of this enlightened technique is Warden Lawes of Sing Sing, who vouches for the complete rehabilitation of Pitts and urges that he be given a new chance. The man could not have had a better indorsement.

And now a new chance will be given him, Judge Landis having overruled an earlier decision, stipulating only that Pitts or his employers must not attempt to capitalize on his prison career. His talents run to baseball: let him resume his place in society by playing the game. The country will follow his fortunes with interest, not so much to see what his batting and fielding abilities may be, but more to reassure itself that modern penology is not simply high-sounding theory and sob-sister sentimentality and that Jean Valjean, were he alive today, could find good reason to believe that civilization does not forever stand still.

Prophets continue to predict a business revival, but only profits will ever bring one.

"The President Says You Must Stay At Home!"

The Post Impressionist

Retreat From Mons.

Post Office, Wednesday.

VERY few soldiers are good controversialists. "Theirs not to reason why"—or why not. And that gallant soldier British Field Marshal Lord Milne has failed to prove himself one of the few.

* * *

All that he has done, in this respect, is to utter what the Post-Impressionist hopes—vainly, no doubt, but hopes—is the last word in the Mons Retreat debate.

* * *

The other day we told you how ace-high war-correspondent Hamilton Fyfe put himself right in regard to that contemporaneous dispatch of his about the Retreat—the dispatch which, for 21 years, British bureaucrats have been condemning as "dangerous" because it hinted at exactly what a mess the staff had got the British Expeditionary Force into. Fyfe said that Lord Birkenhead, chief of the home censorship, had himself edited the dispatch for publication—and had then let Fyfe take all the blame.

What's more, though we didn't use this part of his letter, Fyfe "quoted the published opinions of several eminent soldiers" in support of his story's description of, says he, "the disorder prevailing in those parts of the B. E. F. which I had seen."

* * *

Well, the ink of Fyfe's communication, as printed in the London Times, could not have been much more than dry before Lord Milne was writing to the same newspaper about it. And this is what the Field Marshal says:

"Mr. Hamilton Fyfe gives the impression that the British Army, after the battles of Mons and La Cateau, retired in a state of extreme disorder and confusion. Though this state of affairs may have applied to a portion of the Army, and even then for a few days only, it did not apply to the whole.

* * *

"As the First Corps had experienced no severe fighting, they can not have been in a state of disorganization. As regards Gen. Snow's Fourth Division, with which I was serving as C. R. A., the statement is incorrect."

* * *

"The weary infantry, after severe losses, may have been a bit mixed up. But all units were organized in the early morning and, thanks to the excellent work of the divisional staff and the personality of the commander, the further (sic) retreat was conducted in an orderly manner."

* * *

As we subtly indicated at the outset of the present discourse, this statement somehow or other fails to carry conviction all the way home to us.

Nobody that was there—nobody that has, from elsewhere, unprejudicedly studied those battles—can conscientiously deny either the heroism of the men of the B. E. F. or the valor of their commanders. The latter was splendid, for it was valor in defeat. The former was marvellous, for it was heroism in heartbreak.

But valor and heroism are, like their opposites, qualities entirely accidental to moments of "disorder and confusion" in the sense in which those otherwise relative terms are employed by military science. And surely nobody knows this better than Lord Milne.

* * *

Accept his word concerning Snow's Division. Lord Milne was there, and his word is more than sufficient.

* * *

What, however, about the rest of the retreating force?

* * *

Lord Milne admits that the terms in question ("a state of affairs," he significantly calls them) "may have applied to a portion of the Army . . . for a few days." We should think so.

Yet: "As the First Corps had experienced no severe fighting, they can not have been in a state of disorganization." This somewhat odd statement at least gives us a key to Lord Milne's definition of terms. Evidently, he interprets "disorder and confusion" as results of "disorganization."

* * *

Well, then!

"Extreme disorder and confusion": In the British military vocabulary, has that adjective "extreme" a limitation with which the Post-Impressionist is unfamiliar? Though confusion and disorder are of many kinds, there is no military man or military critic anywhere who wouldn't admit that, when troops have "lost their units"—when they are, in another phrase, "not under command"—they (be they never so heroic) are technically "confused and disordered."

* * *

And, as everybody is aware, this was exactly the plight of a great portion of the thoroughly brave, but momentarily unfortunate, B. E. F. in the Mons retreat.

* * *

Anyhow, we like the way that the editor of the London Times postscripts the field marshal's letter: "The point of Mr. Fyfe's letter was . . . the fact that the head of the Press Bureau approved and intensified the gloom of the dispatch in which the retreat was described. The precise extent of the disorder in the B. E. F. is not a subject on which controversy can be usefully continued now."

Street Car Vs. Bus.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why are we having all this daily and hourly news about the revolutionary changes about to be placed in effect for public transportation in the District of Columbia? It is true the buses serve their purpose, and many people want to ride in them. But is it necessary to remove street cars from lines where the traffic by motor is already like a madhouse, and add heavy large buses to the present motor congestion?

Is the urge for buses to replace cars backed up by large motor interests? It certainly seems that there is a definite purpose behind all the daily propaganda constantly in the papers on the subject. The public has now been so trained to prefer motor service of every kind that the majority seem to give no thought to the matter except to agree that buses are best.

If one begins to compare cars and buses, he will say, referring to buses, "They get there quicker"—as if that settled the whole problem. It is an interesting study of human nature to hear some bus enthusiasts talk. They will crowd into a two-by-four bus—or even the new-style ones, with narrow aisles only wide enough for a cat to walk; with their heads almost bumping through the ceiling; one man driving and being responsible for everything; not one in a thousand passengers probably knowing there is an emergency exit, much less how to use it; and almost worst of all, the place saturated to suffocation with bus gas and bad air—yet if the same person is in a crowded street car, even though it is a two-man car, with much wider aisles, two feet or more over the head, and no suffocating gas—how they will express their disgust, and heap ridicule, and sarcasm and contempt on the Capital Transit Co. and its street cars!

Another consideration: What of the present employes of the street cars?

One other consideration: How much thought has been given to the matter of winter transportation? For several weeks last winter our streets were almost daily a smooth glare of ice, or else deep mountains and valleys of ice and snow. What happened to the auto owners and bus riders then? Most of us know that they rode in the street cars until it was very noticeable how the cars were crowded with the extra passengers. Many suburban people are very glad to leave their autos at home in that kind of weather and trust to the street cars. How safe will they be in buses in such weather?

If the public and the powers in control will give some real support and encouragement to the Capital Transit Co., in a few months or so we might be seeing the beginnings of real first-class street car service, and a system of transportation that will be comfortable and convenient and as safe as possible. We will not make progress in that direction so rapidly if we have nothing but sarcasm and disgust and ridicule and insults for the present transportation—whether street cars or buses. (And I am no stockholder and have no interest whatsoever in any of the lines, and know none of the individuals connected with them!)

S. E. DAVISON.

Washington, June 15.

New Deal Avenue?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Inasmuch as Rush Holt will, in all probability, be given his seat on June 19 as a Senator from West Virginia, notwithstanding the plain inhibitions of the Constitution, and inasmuch as Mr. Holt has himself declared he intended to be a "rubber stamp for President Roosevelt," it would harmonize with the eternal fitness of things if the youthful Senator would introduce as his first bill one providing for the changing of the name of "Constitution avenue" to "New Deal avenue."

Anything that reminds the citizens of the Constitution, once regarded as the "sheet anchor of our liberties," must be obliterated as speedily as possible and Rush is the boy to take the lead in this movement.

W. A. R.

Washington, June 17.

"Contract, Don't Expand."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Have we lost all sense of the ridiculous? Beginning with the South Sea bubble, all panics, and especially ours, have been from over-expansion. Nevertheless, Congress and the "Modern" mariner and the bankers are all arguing primarily about methods of bigger or better expansion of credit. Let's learn how to contract!

See Horace II, Book X, Ode, which says: "In distressing times be brave and courageous. Wisely contract your sails under a dangerously favorable wind." A. B.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 14.

Government By Machine.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It will take many years for business to have confidence that an appointed Federal Trades Commission will be as nonpolitical as our Supreme Court.

Figuratively speaking, immediate confidence can come from glass-sided statistical machines publicly operated by such a commission, in which simple index figures of general knowledge to most people shall operate the graduated scales and levers during periods between prosperity and panic. Being a machine, it can be pretested by indices and proved equitable. As all machines are merely applied mathematics, and as true figures do not lie, the value of a machine is that it is ocular, and the political opponent of the maker can instantly prove any fraud in its construction.

We are not a mathematical people, but gladly pay a 15 per cent commission to have our dog races run by pari-mutuel. Why not the interstate codes of our Federal Government?

GEORGE CARTER CHANEY.

An Exigency Of Headlining.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A headline in The Post of June 17: "Mexico City Mob Decries Catholic Ban."

Mob: Definition by Funk & Wagnalls Desk Standard Dictionary: 1. A turbulent or lawless crowd. 2. The lowest class of people.

I object to your inconsistency, for later on in the dispatch appears the statement that the "demonstrators dispersed in an orderly fashion." Furthermore, the fact that speeches were made in English does not tend to show that the "lowest class of people" were alone in the demonstration.

GREGOR H. HEINE.

Washington, June 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There can be no justification of the headline in this morning's Post designating as a "mob" the 15,000 persons who, without police supervision or assistance, marched in the City of Mexico and "dispersed in orderly fashion" with the spontaneous exclamation of a mere youth as the only untoward incident worthy of comment.

This remarkable observance of law and order by a people seeking only religious freedom deserves better treatment by your excellent journal. JOHN M. GOLDEN.

Louisville, Ky., June 17.

"Give Pitts A Chance!"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Judge Bramham's ruling to exclude Edwin Pitts from playing baseball with the Albany Senators says in effect that the greatest sport in America should do so unsportsman an act as to impose a life sentence on Edwin Pitts because he has been in jail and paid his penalty for past misconduct.

American baseball should be proud to feel that Pitts wants to live up to the standards of that great profession in the future, and should be the first to give him the chance to do it. Judge Bramham's smug pronouncements put him back in the days when men were branded for their misdeeds.

It is to be hoped that the public, which supports baseball, will make its voice heard so that Judge Landis will know that Judge Bramham is speaking for a very small group of self-righteous bigots.

FORD EDWARDS.

"Impoverished Investors To Count."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to approve, most heartily, of the punchy letter contributed to your issue of June 10 by Henry D. Baker, of Durham, N. C. These "must" bills before Congress, so stamped at the White House, demand a protest from all defenders of the Constitution.

Were the members of this present Congress appointed by the President? Are they removable by him? Or were they elected by the people to be responsible to the citizens of this country?

We hope Mr. Baker will have something to say about the Wheeler bill, now being jammed through Congress. The millions of investors in utility securities, who have already suffered losses of billions, are now in a fighting mood against further oppressions. They are condemning more vigorously every day the Government's jumping into the power industry, in all sections of the country, with its 18-inch "yardstick" for determining reasonable rates for power. Are the investments of 10,000,000 citizens to be sacrificed on the altar of a mythical "social justice," as carried on the air by some fanatical "rabble rouser?"

Congress has been repeatedly advised by some of the best legal authority that the Wheeler measure will certainly be voided by the United States Supreme Court. Many members, however, seem to think it shrewd and smart politics to make such gestures in favor of consumers, even if certain that their legislative folly will be junked. Adding to the expense of operating utilities and retarding recovery by another stab at confidence means nothing to them. Maybe the wrath of 10,000,000 impoverished investors will count at next election time.

They'll "Chaos" Alone.

OF all the bureaucrats with which Washington is now infested those over at the Agricultural Administration are undoubtedly the cutest. The others have tried to bulldoze their way through as did the NRA. But the AAA fellows from the beginning have followed the meek and pleading policy. The people are just always pressing power upon them and frequently you think they are just going to break down and cry.

One of the funniest things to happen around here was the way in which they broke away from the chaos parade which followed the downfall of the NRA. All of the Administration, including the White House, was running around yelping "chaos, chaos" and right along with them were Messrs. Henry Wallace and Chester Davis. They would listen to the master say, "chaos, chaos" then they would chorus "chaos, chaos." Henry has always been a most pessimistic appearing sort of a fellow and to view that chaos parade one would have thought we would just have to bury him in spite of everything.

• • • •

But right at the height of the parade an idea occurred to either Henry or Chester. Whichever one it was, little beams followed by a question mark popped out of his head just like ideas occur to characters in the comic strips. The idea was that maybe the chaos could be turned to good account for the dear old AAA. The AAA for two years had been having trouble getting from Congress what it called clarifying amendments to the agricultural act, little amendments, of not much importance—so they said—that would have given Henry and Chester licensing authority over all merchants who handled farm products.

Well, sir, when Henry and Chester had their idea, they dashed from the parade of chaos rousers without even saying "excuse me," and ran over to their offices whence the word came shortly that they were burning the midnight oil in an effort to salvage the AAA structure from the chaos which had befallen everything else.

Then after a few days they announced with an enthusiasm which belied their years, by jinks, they had accomplished it, they had worked out a plan to save the farm structure. Instead of licensing the merchants, Henry would seek authority simply to issue orders as to what they should do. Isn't that cute?

• • • •

The bill giving Henry authority to order the merchants around instead of licensing them is pending now. It was worked out to conform to the Supreme Court's decision on the NRA, Henry and Chester say. And Marvin Jones, House Agricultural Committee chairman, says yes, that's right, and other Representatives and Senators seem to be of the same attitude. They were having all sorts of difficulty getting the licensing authority, but were pressing it doggedly, nevertheless. Now, by appearing to accept the Supreme Court decision gracefully, they seem to be in an excellent position to get a bill just as vicious.

For downright naivete Henry and Chester take the cake. It is rather generally assumed that the Supreme Court, as soon as it gets back from its summer vacation, will knock into a cocked hat such control of handlers of farm products as the AAA has been trying to undertake. There are a number of adverse decisions on the way up from the lower courts.

If the new bill is put through, however, the actions will have to be started all over again.

• • • •

It is doubtful, though, if Henry and Chester are fooling a soul, that is, none except themselves. Regardless of what kind of a bill they get they aren't going to get control of the food merchants and processors. The pending bill would limit their jurisdiction to interstate commerce. This really wouldn't mean much to them. What they hope to do is to be able to broaden meaning of interstate commerce in administering the bill, just as Donald Richberg was hopeful of doing in the NRA. When the bureaucrats are confined to interstate commerce their scope is considerably restricted. By getting a new bill and more time they hope to succeed by bluff where Donald failed. But the trouble is that the Supreme Court decision was widely read. In view of this it is doubtful if any business in the country will permit Henry and Chester to bluff it. The result will be that in a few months they will be doing a chaos parade all by themselves. The NRA boys won't be here to help them.

Shakespeare Still Top

Avon's Bard Still Most Popular Of All, With John Barrymore And Leslie Howard Contemplating Roles As Well As The Lunts, Philip Merivale And The Indefatigable Hampden.

By Ralph E. Renaud.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

IF every playwright in the world were suddenly stricken with sterility the theater would continue to thrive, for William Shakespeare, whose work ended some time ago without any recognition whatever from the Nobel prize committee, still remains the most popular of them all. Every actor and actress looks forward to assuming the Shakespearean mantle at some period of his life, just as the politician sees himself taking the crown of empire. It was the serious, yet ridiculous, ambition of Eddie Foy, that triangular-mouthed clown of an elder generation, to play Hamlet and there isn't an ingenue on the stage who doesn't see herself as Juliet.

It is strange, too, how popular Shakespeare remains with the public. Perhaps he doesn't pile up the long runs, and his heirs certainly are not accumulating much in royalties. But it isn't just the school children who follow the Shakespearean performances. Shakespeare nights are among the most attended on the municipal relief circuit. The common people, who have not acquired a Broadway sophistication, like him and the Broadwayites smile a superior smile and continue to part with their money at the box office wherever a good performance of the bard is to be seen.

It may be that the Swan of Avon is a little more modern than has been suspected. He certainly wrote several good propaganda plays, including the "Merchant of Venice," and his sense of the theater is infallible. It is fair to say that Shaw is today dated more completely than Shakespeare.

• • • •

THIS essay merely leads up to the fact that the next theatrical season in New York is going to be a Shakespeare season. Leslie Howard has announced his intention of reviving Hamlet and will probably be the chief star in the classic firmament. Having sold the movie rights of Robert Sherwood's "The Petrified Forest," in which he is the majority stockholder, to the movies for what looks like $115,000, Mr. Howard can well afford to luxuriate in Danish melancholy.

John Barrymore, having disgusted himself with the movies and their pressure on the domestic relations, is considering a return to the stage as Hamlet. As he demonstrated once before, he has a high specific gravity for the part. It is a curious thing how the movies have shied away from the Shakespeare plays, with all their wealth of material. Probably Hollywood is not ready for them and not sufficiently certain of its art. But now that Grace Moore has shown what can be done with grand opera on the screen, and after the success of the great classic novelists, there may be a Shakespeare movement in the studios yet.

The Theater Guild will probably open its season with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in their version of "The Taming of the Shrew." Philip Merivale and Gladys Cooper will offer "Othello" and "Macbeth," and Walter Hampden always has several Shakespearean shots in his locker. Broadway trends are catching and it is probable that when the news gets thoroughly circulated there will be several more Shakespearean ventures posted on the bills.

FRANK GREGES, "honest sandwich man," the 67-year-old sign carrier who returned $42,000 worth of negotiable securities he found on Broad street and who leaped to fame and comparative riches only to plung into insanity, all within six months, has become a real sandwich man. He has discarded his canvas advertising boards and has started in slicing ham for a Fulton street rathskeller.

There was a time in Greges' career when the height of his ambition was a new pair of shoes. But he has the shoes and his recent experiences have turned his mind to more lasting things. He is shopping now for a coffin. He can't quite make up his mind whether he wants a first-class coffin or a bargain coffin, but he is definitely seeking a final resting place. "I have to prepare," says Frank.

But alas, that there should be a thorn on every rose, a fly in every pat of butter. Frank's sycle of ups and downs was such a perfect epic of misfortune that it seems a pity to expose the ant beneath the undershirt. Frank never would have been a plodding sandwich man in the first place if it hadn't been for his taste for liquor. He used to work before for the rathskeller, where he is now, but lost his job when his foot slipped. Now he has taken the pledge.

Frank has decided views on life. He hates Bellevue Hospital, high finance, fame, women, liquor, reporters and people who think he went crazy for a while. "I am all right," he says. "I hate women because they hate me, so I have not got worries like most men. This here slicing baloney is better than carrying signs. How do you like my apron?"

THE Brooklyn Museum is involved in a mystery as deep as the Lindbergh kidnaping. Indeed it has all the aspects of a kidnaping, though the life of no human is at stake. The local police seem completely stumped by the case, which offers a series of complexities that ought to interest the G-men.

Two years ago thieves concealed themselves in the museum one Saturday night and stole ten of its most valuable paintings, including a Luini, a Rubens, a Lucas Cranach, a Fra Angelico, a Thomas Lawrence, a George Romney and a Van Dyck, all from the Friesdam collection. A steel brace was fitted to one of the windows and the pictures were lowered by a rope and pulley. The robbers descended the same rope, five stories down, and made a clean getaway.

The museum authorities have been most reticent about recent developments, but it appears that four of the paintings have been returned, the other six being still held for ransom. The thief or thieves sent a letter to the curator offering to send back a minority of the canvases, the four which the curator would name as worth the least, as an evidence that they still possessed the others. As a rendezvous, of all places, they designated a newsstand in the subway. When the authorities arrived the pictures were there on top of the stand, but no canvas-napers. And up to date not a trace of them has been turned up. What they are holding the remaining pictures for has not been given out, but there seems to be a needy artist among the gang who has a sense of artistic values. No attempt has been made to sell the works to a dealer, and the only clew to the mystery is the ransom letter. The famous theft of the Mona Lisa from the Louvre seems to have been child's play compared to the wholesale abstraction of the Brooklyn thieves.

Symbol Of A Race

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

IN connection with the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of King George's reign, I think it will interest all my readers if I quote from the London Times the speech made on May 5 by Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the leader of the Conservative Party in the House of Commons, because this speech helps to explain why nearly all the members of the British Commonwealth are so loyal to the throne.

• • • •

"... today the position of the crown in the constitution must be present to every mind, and I think we may well ask ourselves what it is that it stands for.

"The position of the crown and of the king in this country is not merely a matter of sentiment, important as that is. It is a matter of the most profound political interest and importance. If you look back through the ages during which this great country in almost continuous and perpetual succession has enjoyed a monarchy, you will notice that with the passing of the centuries what you may call the prerogative of the crown, its direct power, has gradually and steadily diminished, while at the same time the influence of the crown, the importance of the crown, the necessity of the crown, has become a thing of paramount importance. There may have been times in our history when you might have contemplated a Great Britain without a crown; the thing can not be contemplated today.

"When we watch contemporary history around us we realize in these islands the enormous value of that steadfast, continuous, traditional, nonpolitical head, and we see other countries with their difficulties, with their precedents and with their power being usurped by dictators and by tyrants. But, after all, in our empire this country is but a small unit today. If in any cataclysm the crown vanished, the empire would vanish with it, and that is a truth that you can not hold too closely to your breast.

"You can not conceive in the political development of the empire in the last quarter of a century that any political party in this country, or combination of political parties, would hold together an empire scattered throughout the world and that great Indian Empire besides. More and more as the older ties become attenuated, the older imperial ties, the tie of the crown becomes stronger and more personal every year we live. We have evidence of that today in the tone and spirit and the temper of the demonstration and thanksgiving which are patent to the world from one end of the empire to the other.

"So we may pray, as we believe, that the crown, that great symbol of our race and of our unity throughout the world, may be perpetual with the constitution of our country. It is a link which once broken can never be repaired, and so long as the tradition to which we have all been accustomed and our fathers before us, that tradition that guides those who sit on our august throne—so long as that tradition lasts it will be blessed to our country and no power on earth can ever break it.

No End of Books

Tess Of The Blurbs And Frills.

MISS TESS SLESINGER rode out of the West—the "nice" West Side of New York—a year ago this May, bearing under her arm that keen-edged and beautifully written novel, "The Unpossessed." Oh, she had been making forays, mostly into the little magazines—and one of those short stories, "Missis Flinders," printed when Story Magazine was in Europe, 1931-33, still bears about its shoulders the nimbus of perfection.

Now she rides out once more, with a volume of ten short stories and a novelette: "Time: the Present" (Simon & Schuster, $2.50). "Missis Flinders"—it was the final chapter of "The Unpossessed"—appears once again; as far as I'm concerned Miss Slesinger can make this an annual function with my blessing. For like a good bellwether, that tale seems able to lead out a flock of co-equals.

• • • •

NOW there is one story in the book which ought to have put the reviewers on their guard. "After the Party" tells about a semigrande dame who tries to recover from her nervous breakdown by giving, three times a week, strenuous literary parties for literary lions. Little Miss Regina Sawyer had been at Mrs. Colburne's a number of times, but mouse-like and unregarded. Then one morning Mrs. C. and her secretary opened up the book sections and there, bold, flaring in their faces, were huge reviews of the little miss's new novel, "The Undecided." (Hm! Do you see?)

So the avid lion-hunters read them aloud—there's a good bit more to the tale, but this is my present point. "Vivid * * * portrayal New York intelligentsia * * * promising newcomer * * * daring, witty, penetrating, compassionate," reads Mrs. C. "Intellectual claptrap * * * wordy nightmare * * * vicious and not very clever portrayals * * * trite, dull, unimaginative, cruel," reads the secretary. "Well, for goodness' sake!" they both exclaim.

And that, gentlemen, is Tess Slesinger telling us by implication what she thought of the usual reviewing guff which greeted "The Unpossessed." The blurbs and frills were tossed at her. She doesn't, let us say, really respect them.

• • • •

WELL, Miss Slesinger, what would you have? But you know already that it's too easy for us to dust off the thesaurus and trot out the adjectives. You really know that it's no great shakes to make you out to be one of the superlative short-story writers of our time, or, on the other hand, to cast sly stilettos at your carrying (and pretty sick of the tag, you are, I dare say) at the banner of the intellectual young. But I'm glad you warned me off those well-trodden preserves. I can tell you, then, how you gave me one of the valid literary emotions—envy.

Envy? Yes, you're motivated by that yourself. There's a blurb line on the jacket of your book which, in the 999 other cases, would have made me decidedly unwell. "A young writer," it goes, "whose major interest is in living." My hat! And yet it seems to be quite true.

For in all these stories you are envying, coveting, even lusting passionately after the sheer living you have had, or seen, or sensed, or guessed elsewhere. Please don't embarrass me by asking me to draw a line between roles you've plucked out of memory and roles you've lived in vicariously. There's a great plenty of both. And in all of them there is a tension and an excitement which the rest of us feel on some too troublingly expansive spring morning, which—to pick out another literary example—was the prime moving point of Mr. Wolfe's "Of Time and the River." It's the envy not only to be 14 or 17 or 23 again—it's the envy to live inside everybody else. And that's why you write, isn't it? That's certainly what you give us.

• • • •

READERS aren't to come to "Time: The Present" for plot and story neatly dished out (though one or two of the tales have that pat side), they're to come for that naked, painful, exhilarating, all-too-truthful plunge into the souls of other people.

Here are the little refugee girl from tragic Vienna finding that even with her two friends in great and stable America "the times so unsettled are;" the woman who veers between sentimental love of her mother and duteous love for the stranger who is her husband; the youth from the East Side trying to make a go of his first respectable job in a book store; the secretary helping her boss to spring the mousetrap on his pitiful employes, then feeling the same trap snap on her; her two Negro children growing up in a white school; the wife arguing with herself when she finds her second husband has taken a mistress. Best of all is the novelette, which through a dozen people shows how magnolia blooms and an intolerably sweet spring day affect a girls' school. I'm sure Miss Siesinger herself can scarcely bear to read that over.

For in "After the Party," you see, little Regina Sawyer breaks down and weeps over a copy of her book on Mrs. C.'s table. "Christ," she bawls, "will anything ever mean so much again?" No, there are no blurbs and frills on the real Tess.

Public Schools Plan Revision Of Curriculum

Dr. Peters to Direct Work in Virginia at Summer School Sessions.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., June 18.—The task of writing a new curriculum for Virginia's public schools and instructing teachers in its application is expected to be performed during the first term of the University of Virginia summer school, which opened today.

A special production committee of 30, set up here by the State Board of Education and headed by Dr. D. W. Peters, State director of instruction, has been charged with the duty of revising the tentative program offered during the past several years for experimental purposes, writing in new features, and on the whole putting into final form the new curriculum which will be introduced into the high and elementary school system this fall.

Dr. Hall In Charge.

Under the direction of Dr. Sidney B. Hall, superintendent of public instruction, the work of revising courses of study and experimenting with their usages has been going on for the past three or four years. It is planned to "modernize" elementary and secondary school instruction in an effort to change from the traditional text-book system to methods that will incorporate experience of every-day life.

More than 1,000, mostly public school teachers, were enrolled at the end of the registration period yesterday for the first session's classes, which will end July 27. Several hundred more are expected to enter during the week. A second term will began July 29, and close August 31.

Summer Courses.

Summer school courses have been designed to instruct teachers in the installation and administration of the revised curriculum. Ruth Henderson, assistant State supervisor of elementary education, will conduct some of the classes, and Dr. Peters will remain throughout the first term for consultation purposes.

A general conference of all public school officials and teachers, directed by Dr. Hall, will be held here in August for the purpose of clarifying the proposed changes and praised by city and county school heads. Some contend that the new plan is too complicated for practical use, while others have supported it wholeheartedly.

It has been pointed out that "It is the purpose of the State Board of Education to introduce gradually into the schools of Virginia the new or revised curriculum," rather than force its adoption before the units of the system are prepared to accept it.

Men, being men, can not tell you very much about women. For instance, to the young-man-in-love the opposite sex is all sweetness and light; the bachelor, who has dodged the ladies for years, believes them to be scheming minxes, and the married man is probably afraid to tell you what he really thinks.

Therefore, to get a true opinion of women, you must go to a woman for your information . . . and so we've gone to Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of The Washington Post's woman's pages, to find out about those lovely and sometimes sweet creatures who do so much to make our lives happy and miserable. And Miss Lindsay certainly tells us, and all other readers of The Post, about "The Gentle Sex." You'll find her impressions of her sisters . . . and brothers, too . . . in The Post each Sunday morning to entertain . . . and educate you. Each week she writes this amusing, intelligent column which so satirically punctures so many of our illusions, and which gives us an insight into the levious ways of women.

For example, she outlines the character of Tactful Tillie, who never comes right out and tells her friends they are getting fat. Oh, no! Tactful Tillie merely sniffs, "Are'nt you getting a bit stout, dearie?" Tactful Tillie, Miss Lindsay also reveals, prides herself on being able to find out disagreeable things by a method which is practically painless . . . to her.

Or Miss Lindsay describes the conversation at the Sunday dinner table; and her description is as true to life as the family laundry line. You can recognize Uncle Henry, who wants to talk politics, and Aunt Susan, who simply must tell Cousin Mary about those perfectly darling little needlepoint footstools she saw downtown for only $2.98, or, if you read carefully, you might recognize yourself!

We are sure that Miss Lindsay's sardonic humor will please you as much as it pleases us . . . we think it's one of the best features in The Sunday Post. Gently, oh, so very gently, the barb of her wit penetrates . . . but you're laughing so much you don't mind the sting.

"The Gentle Sex," which has become one of the best-liked columns in The Sunday Post, may be found each Sunday morning on the woman's pages of

An Open Letter to Judge Landis:

New York, June 18.

Dear Judge: Congrats on the Alabama Pitts decision. E. S.

George Olsen:

Dear George: Caught your act at Loew's State, and I don't know when I've had such an enjoyable time in a theater. Watching your band in action, it's easy enough to determine why you've stayed up on top of the heap so long. The people get tired of the same old things, done the same old way. You try to give 'em something different. The Kentucky Derby novelty, the unusual treatment of "Man On the Flying Trapeze," the novel introduction of the birth of band instruments—all of these are unusual, something new—and the audience gets a tremendous kick out of the knowledge that you're doing your level best to entertain them. But the sock of the whole evening was your frau, Ethel Shutta. She is the greatest femme performer on the stage today, with no "ifs" or "buts." She's terrific.

Sincerely, E. S.

• • • •

Jimmy Braddock:

Dear Jimmy: Stay as nice as you are. You'll never know what a thrill the entire country got out of your first instinctive thought of your three youngsters and their mother when you won. To you, the winning of the championship meant that you'd get enough money to permit the kids and your wife to live with a little more dignity. You said more in that one line than any heavyweight champion has said in the past 50 years. Every other champ has had to lose the title to become popular, by expressing one nice thought. Sincerely, ED.

• • • •

Dolores Costello:

Dear Dolores: You'd like to know, I think, that everybody on Broadway is raving about you. The whole town feels that you've handled yourself beautifully throughout the entire controversy with J. Barrymore. Probably there is much to be said on both sides, but the fact that you haven't said anything has made you Tops around here. I just thought you'd like to know. Sincerely, E. S.

• • • •

George Raft:

Dear George: A lot of us who like you a whole lot, have been worried about you in the last six months. It seemed that the master minds at Paramount either deliberately or unintentionally had set about the task of ruining you. But I saw "The Glass Key," Georgie, and everything is okay. It proves again that if they'll give you the right stories and the right characterizations you are a definite and vivid box office personality. Insist on Frank Tuttle to direct your next flicker. He did a magnificent job with this one, and Edward Arnold and Quin Willmais contributed plenty of help. That bit of business where you kick Ray Milland in the shins is a honey. You'll have the whole town kicking shins before the week is over. As ever, E. S.

• • • •

Alice Brady:

Dear Alice: I saw you in "Let 'Em Have It" at the Rivoli the other night. You appeared in perhaps six badly constructed and poorly directed scenes, and watching you on the screen, I kept thinking back to the tremendously important role you played so deftly in "Mourning Becomes Electra." Probably you get a lot more money playing short, unimportant scenes in the movies than you got on the Broadway stage, but Alice, it's hardly worth it. You have a great talent, and the Broadway playhouses, impoverished for talent, need it badly. Come back—all is forgiven. As ever, Ed.

• • • •

Jock Whitney:

Dear Jock: Your technicolor experiment with the full-length "Becky Sharp," is the most exciting thing that has happened in local playhouses since Warner's introduced Vitaphone. Judged as an experiment in color, it is a great success. That one scene where the officers of Wellington dash along the hallways, their cloaks fluttering in the wind, was a thrilling sequence, because of color. That second scene, where Miriam Hopkins is huddled on the rug and the color cameras pick out the details of her dress and the pattern of the rug, was another triumph for color. The story was bad, would have been bad in black and white. Treat such a story as "Lives of a Bengal Lancer" in color and you'll get what you are seeking, because unless the story is great, color will detract from it. What you have done so far is deserving of full praise. What you will do in the future will make a lot of money for you. Sincerely, E. S.

Max Baer:

Dear Maxie: Little man, what now? Sincerely, E. S.

Secreted Valuables Stolen.

Ernest H. Fairburn's precaution to secrete valuable jewelry in his apartment at 700 Third street northwest was futile yesterday. He told police that rings and diamonds, valued at $500, had been stolen. The valuables were wrapped in a handkerchief and hidden in a hollow door jam, he said.

N. Y. Waitress Blamed in Sale To Tipsy Man

It was a New York waitress, one of 150 brought here to serve the Shriners, who sold drinks to an intoxicated man in the Gingham Club atop Child's Restaurant Thursday night, the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was told at a hearing yesterday.

The ABC board is considering what, if any, punishment is to be meted out to the Gingham Club for the alleged offense. Maj. Jerome L. Johnstone, chief investigator for the board, charged officials of the club with having permitted the waitress to sell drinks to a man who already had more than enough.

John R. Yates, attorney for the Child's Restaurant Co., told about the presence here of the New York waitresses during the Shrine conclave. Under the New York law, it was explained, a person who refuses to serve a drink to a customer because he is intoxicated must be prepared to prove he is intoxicated or stand liable to a civil suit for damages.

James J. Hayden, regional superintendent of the Child's Co., and R. J. Walsh, manager of the Gingham Club, asked the board to be content with a warning, promising that every effort would be made to observe the law hereafter.

Incomplete Plans Delay 2 New Swimming Pools

The two new pools to be constructed out of the $1,000,000 PWA park improvement fund will not be ready this season, it was announced yesterday by C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks.

Meanwhile, the two municipal swimming pools on the Monument grounds will remain open. Plans for the new pools have not been completed. One is to be constructed in the vicinity of the Hoover Playground, Second and N streets southwest, and the other in Georgetown.

Foulois Battle May Be Taken To Roosevelt

Rep. Rogers to Exhaust All Means of Ousting Air Corps Head.

By the Associated Press.

A possibility developed last night that President Roosevelt might be called on to settle the difference between the War Department and the House Military Affairs Committee over whether Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois should be relieved of his command of the Army Air Corps.

Representative Rogers (Democrat, New Hampshire, chairman of military sub-committee which urged Foulois' removal more than a year ago, said:

"I am going to carry this thing just as far as I can—to the President if necessary. And if need be, I'll try to shove through a bill over a Presidential veto that would take Foulois out of his office.

"I feel that the honor of one of the oldest standing committees of the House is at stake and that we must act to save our integrity."

The ousting of Foulois was recommended on grounds that he had violated and evaded law and Army regulations in connection with aircraft procurement, misrepresented the ability of the Army to fly the air mail, and was guilty of "gross misconduct and inefficiency."

Secretary Dern absolved Foulois on the first two counts but rebuked him for having given the committee "exaggerated, unfair and misleading statements."

The committee yesterday directed Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, to ask Dern for the full report of the inspector general.

The priceless formula
Many have tried to duplicate the delicate bouquet and flavor of Canada Dry. And all have failed. The formula is secret—the flavor inimitable. Just another reason why only one ginger ale has such distinctive quality and such matchless mellowness...
...of course it's "CANADA DRY"
THE CHAMPAGNE OF GINGER ALES

Through the years, traditions have grown around Canada Dry, until today no occasion seems complete without the sparkling accompaniment of this fine, dry old ginger ale. Unquestioned purity makes Canada Dry first choice for the children; unique flavor and mellowness make it first choice for the long, tall drinks.
And Canada Dry's Sparkling Water proves it's better, too. Even opened and standing in your refrigerator for 24 long hours, it still comes out full of lasting, lively sparkle.
Here's a new Canada Dry treat . . . Lemon-Lime Rickey. Made with the natural juice of choice, ripe limes and lemons. Use it to make delicious rickeys in 10 seconds—at half the usual cost.

Troth Was Announced During Her Visit in Capital Recently.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

A wedding of great interest to Capital society took place yesterday afternoon in New York when Miss Joan Diehl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Diehl, of San Francisco, became the bride of Mr. John Henry Heinz 2d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Heinz, of Pittsburgh, Pa. The ceremony was performed in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's Church, the Rev. George P. T. Sargent, D. D., rector of the church, officiating in the presence of a large company of friends and relatives.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of silver-white satin made on medieval lines, with long fitted sleeves ending in points over the hands. Interest in Herbs Stimulated by All Hallows' Guild Garden at the Cathedral

New Bath Aid Is a Real Find; So Is Man's Kit

By Ruth Anne Davis.

THE AVERAGE woman who prefers her tub to a shower is highly apt to change her mind after giving "showerpep" a try.

"Showerpep" is an entirely new item. It's something we've been needing and wanting for many years. It's unlike any other bath accessory, and yet it's so simple you'll wonder why you never thought of it.

It looks like a number of things, a padded washcloth, or a beanbag, for instance. You remember the beanbags you played with as a child? Well, "showerpep" is built on much the same lines. It's made of soft terry cloth and filled with a powder which cleanses, perfumes, deodorizes, and invigorates the body all at the same time.

A little ribbon around one side allows you to slip your hand through and get a good grip. Now, as you stand beneath the shower and the water splashes over you, give yourself a good rubdown scrubbing with a "showerpep."

When you go for a swim remember to take a "showerpep" along for a pleasant aftermath. When you come out of the water and rinse off under the shower, one of these fragrant little packs will prove a real boon.

Showerpeps are inexpensive. Six of them come together in a neat little cellophane package that costs only 50 cents. There are three fragrances, pine, lilac and rose.

Vacation Kits for Hubby.

Just as most men never get beyond the stage of thinking no apple pie compares with that their mothers made, few of them ever outgrow a childish delight over surprise packages. Nowadays so many wives are restrained by their budgets that husbands, poor dears, rarely come in for gifts aside from the necessary socks, ties, etc.

Here's a suggestion. Now that it's almost vacation time, why not loosen your budget shackles and buy hubby one of those choice vacation kits which include a tin of talcum, a lathery shave cream, a package of blades, and a skin bracer.

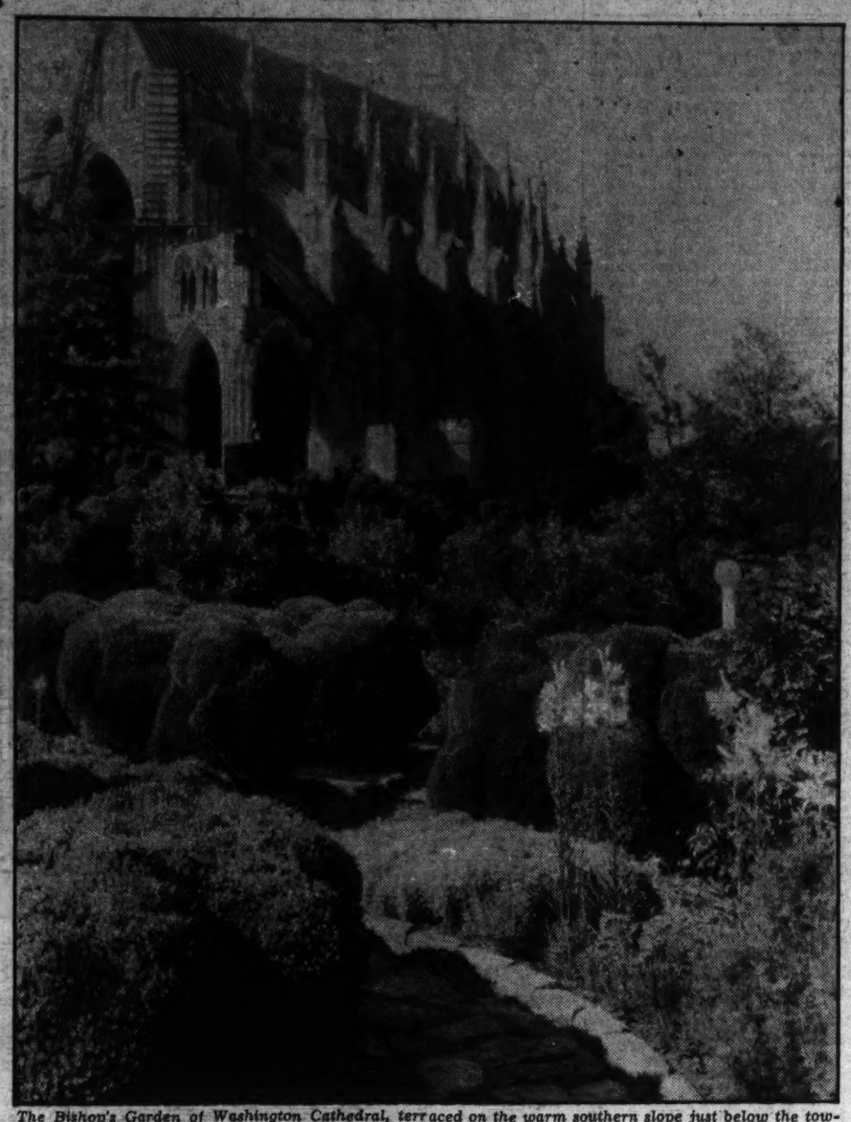
These kits were planned by a man for a man, to make vacation time more fun than ever, and traveling less of a burden. The price is modest—only $1 for the complete outfit.

Sunburn Preventer.

The brave young woman who basks on the beach all day often rues those pleasant, lazy hours later on. When she discovers that the sun has scorched instead of tanned and that her face has become a gathering place for freckles, she's apt to wonder why she didn't fortify herself before the lengthy sunbath.

Nowadays it's so easy to fortify one's self! Cosmetic houses supply us with sun creams, protective lotions and dozens of other things that permit a light tan, or no tan at all, just as we see fit. One beauty specialist has lately come out with a splendid oil, which you put on your skin as a sort of foundation lotion. Next comes your make-up. The oil not only helps keep the powder and rouge on for hours, but it prevents both freckles and sunburn.

Women with oily skin will like it extremely well. They are frequently troubled by the rays of the sun making their skin even drier. This oil serves as a lubricant and prevents the skin from acquiring that unflattering summer parched appearance.



The Bishop's Garden of Washington Cathedral, terraced on the warm southern slope just below the towering Gothic structure, contains old English boxwood, yew, thorn, holly, ivy, cedars of Lebanon, sweet-scented herbs, roses, lilies and old-fashioned flowers; ancient stone, rare Norman and Gothic carvings. In the foreground is that portion of the Bishop's Garden known as "Hortulus: The Little Garden," a Ninth Century Herb Garden.

Fragrant Plants Are Being Grown in All Parts of Capital.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

WASHINGTON women who are home makers and garden lovers are becoming more and more herb conscious, thus sharing in the country-wide renaissance of interest in the useful little plants that furnish flavor and fragrance to the garden.

The history of herbs is a record of the race itself. History, song, poetry and even art cluster around their use. The renewed interest in them on the part of American women is a sign they are remembering some of the sturdy, simple enduring ways and pursuits of their grandmothers, whose herb gardens, still rooms and sweet-smelling bundles of dried herbs in winter time were pieces of the mosaic of American life.

Much of this new interest can be traced to the Cottage Herb Garden conducted by All Hallows' Guild in Washington Cathedral Close where hundreds of thriving herb plants have furnished the nucleus for individual herb gardens in all parts of the city.

Nestled near the Norman Gate, the entrance to the Bishop's Garden Cathedral Close is the quaint Cottage Herb Garden of All Hallow's Guild. It is a tiny spot as space itself counts but filled with a multitude of lovely things. Outside the Herb Cottage itself is the garden with an old stone stile at the far end and beyond it another garden with dipping pool. A curving, low stone wall encloses the whole plat; thyme, sweet marjoram, basil, winter savory, with its starry flowers giving forth fragrances from hidden crack and crevice.

Let us take a little stroll up the garden part and study some of the herbs at first hand.

Queen Favored Sweet Woodruff.

Here is sweet woodruff, with its oddly shaped leaves, once so loved she herself gathered it, comparing by Queen Elizabeth of England that its fragrance when fresh cut to that of new mown hay, placing it in sandal wood boxes for future use in perfuming what might have been called her boudoir. Visitors to the Cottage Herb Garden select sweet woodruff frequently for its beauty and winsomeness.

Henry Beston, author of "Herbs and the Earth," says: "And herb is a garden plant which has been cherished for itself and for a use." Surely this fits well the glorious family of Basils, "the king's plant," and the Earth," says: "An herb is ing of Tyrian or red plum purple or its living green. Part of your "tussy mussy" or garden nosegay, divine in cooking recipes especially foreordained for an alliance with tomatoes in every style, ancient in usage, Basil plants form a part of every complete herb garden.

And here is "rue even for ruth," as Shakespeare has the Duke of York's gardener at Langley put it, as he planted a bank of rue "in the remembrance of a weeping queen" (Richard's Queen). This sentimental identity between the dark leaf and the emotion of "ruth," or compassionate sorrow, was prevalent in early England.

In summer time, when stings of bees or wasps are likely, your rue plant will aid you. For listen to Thomas Newington in his "Book of Receipts," 1719:

"The sting of a Bee or Waspe. Take Rue a handful and stampe the juyce of the leaves and aply to any part hurt by the sting of a bee or a waspe."

Russian Table of Herbs.

"There's rosemary, that's for remembrance; pray, love, remember" sang the mad Ophelia in Shakespeare's Hamlet and gazing at this herb which has been aptly termed "the Russian sable of herbs" one rejoices in its long history, its beauty and the fragrance that is but one of its many virtues. When it blossoms its flowers are of an exquisite shade of blue. An old recipe tells us how to make conserve of Rosemary Flower: "Take 2 pounds of Rosemary flowers," it says, "the same weight of fine sugar, pound them well in a stone mortar; then put the conserve into well-glazed gallipots. It will keep a year or two."

Many Varieties Found in an Exploration of Grounds.

"Lad's Love" they sometimes call the next herb. "Southernwood" is its more formal name and it has a most invigorating scent. It is said that it was introduced into this country in 1548 and it is to be found in most colonial gardens which have survived to the present period.

In the British Herbalist, 1772, Sir John Hill gives the following recipe for Southern ood Tea.

"Clip 4 ounces of the leaves fine and bear them in a mortar with 6 ounces of loaf suger till the whole is like a paste. Three times a day take the bignesses of a nutmeg of this. It is pleasant and one thing in it is particular, it is a composer and always dispose persons to sleep."

Just beneath one's hand now is that darling of herbs, sweet majoram, lovely, human and amiable in character. It is such a well behaved herb, grows anywhere, under most conditions, and has savory and varied kitchen uses. It is also one of the strewing herbs and was always put into the sweetbags for the linen.

Majoram Flavors Soup.

In the kitchen, majoram leaves can be used in stuffings or dressings and also to flavor soups. In small quantities it forms good flavoring with whitefish. As one of the principal ingredients in "herb powder," every homemaker will rejoice in its use. Here is the recipe for herb powder

Take fresh majoram, basil, bay leaf, thyme, parsley, and dry in the sun until brittle; pick carefully off the stalk and rub the leaves into a fine powder. Add a small quantity of dried and pounded lemon peel, allowing one saltspoonful of salt and half a saltspoonful of pepper to each ounce of the powdered herbs. Take a piece of coarse muslin and sift the powdered mixture, then put in dry bottles and cork firmly.—From "Culinary Herbs and Condiments," by Mrs. M. Grieve.

Eleanor Sinclair Rohde says in her book, "A Garden of Herbs," that the Chinese valued this herb so highly that the Dutch in old days carried on a profitable trade by exchanging sage for tea, and for one pound of dried sage leaves the Chinese gave three pounds of tea. The proper time of year to eat sage or to drink sage tea is in spring, and formerly country folk used to eat quantities of it with bread and butter or bread and cheese.

Recipe for Sage Cream.

Miss Rhode also gives an old recipe for sage cream taken from "The Receipt Book of Joseph Cooper," cook to Charles I, 1654.

Sage cream—Boil a quart of cream, pound red sage in a mortar, put into the cream a quarter of a pint of canary and a quarter of a pint of rosewater with half a pound of sugar. After the same manner you may do any sort of good herbs.

There are many more herbs in the garden, but we stop beside a beautiful specimen of the great perennial umbellates, the lovage. It has something of the taste and also of the look of celery. Its dark and shining leaves make a fine note in the herb garden.

In the Bishop's Garden itself is Hortulus, the little garden, a ninth century herb garden, a spot of sheer loveliness and fragrance, where the herbs of that period flourish and rejoice in their new home.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Should Woman, 36, and Fiance, 42, Take Unchaperoned Trips?

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Your advice in the following situation will be much appreciated. I am 36 years old, with a responsible position and am engaged to marry a business man of 42. We are both considered very young for our years.

• • • •

We are practically alone in the world and will be able to spend the summer week-ends together. We should like to take trips to the beaches and mountains, which would necessitate our staying over one or two nights either on a boat or at a hotel.

• • • •

Could this be done in an entirely proper way? My friends say "yes" and have urged me to go ahead. Looking forward to an early reply in The Post, I am, sincerely yours, M. E. W.

• • • •

DEAR M. E. W.: I believe your friends, while motivated no doubt by the best of intentions, are misadvising you. None but a married couple can properly (in the figurative sense of the word) embark unchaperoned on such trips as you hypothesize. And of course it is the figurative interpretation with which you are concerned.

Age, no matter how great; position, no matter how responsible; character and social standing, no matter how impeccable, have never been known to insulate the perpetrator of openly indiscreet actions, however innocent, from the harm of malicious gossip.

Some sophisticate has said indiscretion is the greatest social sin. In a society generously striated with cynicism, this statement is regrettably true. The severest criticism, the most damaging misconstruction of such vacation sojourns as you tentatively contemplate, would come from the worldly-wise rather than from the pure of heart.

• • • •

Either your friends err on the side of a simple goodness of heart, if such a thing is possible; or they mistakenly assume the world has reached the stage where public opinion is no longer concerned with private lives and that the individual's actions are his own affair.

• • • •

If you would avoid being the storm center of surreptitious whispering, bohemeian tolerance or partisan explanation and defense, you will respect your own hesitancy in this matter and disregard the free-and-easy urgings of your friends.

I should say the only "proper way" to make the contemplated trips would be in company with some married couple of either your own or your fiance's acquaintance.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Miss Noyes to Be Speaker At Exercises in France

Will Address Graduates of Nursing School in Bordeaux.

MISS CLARA D. NOYES, director of the American National Red Cros. Nursing Service, will deliver the commencement address at the first formal graduating ceremony to be held July 1 at the Florence Nightingale Nursing School at Bordeaux, France. Miss Noyes will sail from Baltimore today and after visiting in Paris for two days will arrive at the school in time for the ceremony.

While president of the American Nurses' Association Miss Noyes was instrumental in raising the funds for erecting a large home for nurses at the school, the structure being known as the American Nurses Memorial Building in honor of the American women who lost their lives in Europe during the World War. Since that time she has served as chairman of the American advisory committee for the school.

Previously, numbers of young French women had been graduated from the school, going out to take up their work as soon as their period of tuition was completed. However, it was not until Mme. M. Cornet-Auquier, the present head of the school, had spent several months in America last year studying methods used in hospitals and saw the elaborate ceremonies used at commencement in American hospital schools that she decided to adopt the same practice in the Nightingale School, inviting Miss Noyes to make the first address of that kind at the school.

After the ceremony of Bordeaux, Miss Noyes will attend a meeting of the board of directors of the International Council of Nurses at Geneva. She is vice president of that organization, which is composed of 29 national societies of nurses at the present time.

She is expected to return to America in early August. Miss Noyes resides at 1411 Twenty-ninth street northwest.

MISS CLARA D. NOYES will be a commencement speaker at the Florence Nightingale Nursing School, Bordeaux, France.

What Today Means

"Gemini."

IF JUNE 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m., and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m., and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

Many people may give way to a temptation to tease, or play pranks this day. Should you be subjected to either, be good natured, as any display of irritability may encourage, rather than discourage the joker.

At social gatherings any supercilious manner in contacting other guests, or the help, will be a grave mistake, as the offender will suffer eventually by it. Remember a true gentlewoman or man is always considerate of the feelings of everyone, regardless of their station in life.

Insects Cause 2 Billion Loss A Year in U. S.

List of Simple Remedies Suggested to Victims by Specialist.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WE are not now engaged in armed conflict with other nations of the world. We are, however, waging a relentless warfare against disease producing bacteria. Hundreds of millions of dollars are expended each year in the prevention and cure of disease.

Mankind has another foe—insect life—which attacks crops, forests, garden vegetables, clothing—in fact, most of the things that make up the material world. Furthermore, insects directly affect human life.

The spread of a single insect may be illustrated by the case of the gipsy-moth which escaped from captivity in 1868. Since that time its descendants have spread rapidly through the New England States into adjoining territory. When conditions are favorable the young caterpillars destroy forests, fruit and shade trees, and other types of vegetation.

The Perils of the Fly.

There are a number of flies that are particularly destructive. We have perhaps said enough about the common house fly as a filth carrier, but there are other flies—Deer flies, which spread the disease known as tularemia; horseflies, which can spread anthrax, and the stable fly, which can become such a disturbing element to cattle.

Every schoolboy knows that malaria, yellow fever and dengue are spread by means of mosquitoes. Then there are fleas, lice and bedbugs. The flea is an out and out degenerate. He can not make his own living, hence he attacks man; and the rat flea may carry the infection of bubonic plague. No self-respecting household harbors bedbugs, yet they do persist. Lice also are parasitic and will live in the hair of those who are unclean in their habits. Under proper conditions lice serve as the spreading agent in typhus fever.

There are a few simple remedies that may be mentioned. For mosquito bites Prof. L. O. Howard found that the greatest relief was afforded by rubbing the swollen areas with a moistened bit of soap. The action of most of the anti-mosquito solutions is usually of short duration. Spirits of camphor, oil of pennyroyal, oil of peppermint, citronella oil and alcohol are all helpful while they last, but they evaporate quickly.

In the treatment of bee stings the sting itself should be carefully removed from the wound with the blade of a knife. Grasping the barb with the fingers will squeeze the poison sac and force more toxin into the wound. Diluted ammonia will prove of value in neutralizing the poison of stinging insects.

Sour Cream Basis of Delicious Dishes

By Dorothea Duncan.

IN SPITE of the fact that we have the most modern of household refrigeration, there always comes a time in the summer when we find sour milk or cream in the refrigerator. A hastily planned week-end trip often leaves quantities of milk to stand untouched for days in the refrigerator, or a careless midnight prowler in search of a snack sometimes fails to put the milk bottle back into the refrigerator.

In most cases the soured product is poured down the sink. It is sheer extravagance, of course, but then so few of us have grandmothers to tell us what to do with the sour milk or cream.

Here is a favorite old recipe for making cheese from sour cream. It is delicious served in place of cottage cheese and when spread between thin slices of buttered whole wheat or real brown bread.

Sour cream dressing is exceptionally good when served with crisp, succulent vegetables. Try it the next time you serve sliced cucumbers.

Sour Cream Dressing.

1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
⅛ teaspoon cayenne
1 tablespoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 cup sour cream

This makes an excellent dressing for vegetable salads. Place the salt, sugar and pepper together in a bowl, mix well and add the lemon juice, then the vinegar. When the mixture is smooth, put in the cream, stir well and set on the ice until needed.

Biscuits, waffles, cookies and cakes seem to have a superior quality when baked with sour instead of sweet milk. The recipe which calls for sweet milk may be used with slight changes, and there is a general rule which applies to the changing of a recipe from sweet to sour milk. Soda must take the place of some of the baking powder when the milk is changed from sweet to sour. One cup of sour milk requires one-half teaspoon of soda, and for every one-fourth teaspoon of soda used omit one teaspoon of baking powder. Thus, if the recipe calls for one cup of milk and four teaspoons of baking powder and you wish to substitute one cup of sour milk, you would also use one-half teaspoon of soda and cut the baking powder down to two teaspoons. Following is a recipe for sour milk gingerbread.

Sour Milk Gingerbread.

1 cup molasses
1 cup sour milk
2 1-3 cups flour
1¾ teaspoons soda
2 teaspoons ginger
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons melted butter

Mix sour milk and molasses. Sift together dry ingredients, combine mixtures, add butter and beat vigorously. Pour into greased shallow pan and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit).

For culinary assistance, call Dorothea Duncan, National 4200, or write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

Foes of Seating Rush Holt Gain A Day's Delay

Senator-Elect Was to Try to Take Place Today on Turning 30.

By the Associated Press.

Plans of Senator-elect Rush Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, for presenting himself for his oath of office on his thirtieth birthday today were upset last night when Democratic and Republican leaders agreed to a day's delay in Senate consideration of the contest over his seating.

Meanwhile, Senate Republicans opposing Holt's seating forecast a vigorous fight on the youthful legislator when he appears to be sworn in, but conceded that he "probably" would be seated.

Republican Leader McNary asked Democratic leaders to permit the report of the Elections Committee on the Holt case and the dissenting views of the four committee members opposing Holt's seating to lie on the table a day. The Democratic leaders agreed to this and said they would request Holt not to present himself until tomorrow.

Holt said he would yield to the request.

Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware, who assumed the leadership of the fight against Holt, said he and several other Republicans would take the floor in opposition to Holt's right to Senate membership.

The four members of the elections committee who voted against Holt based their stand on the contention that he is ineligible to be a Senator because he had not attained the constitutional age minimum of 30 years for Senate membership at the start of the term for which he was elected.

Holt supporters, after a poll of the Senate, said, however, that not more than 15 votes would be cast against his right to take his seat.

On the Air Today

"Judging the Stars," a new broadcasting wrinkle, started off its first performance Tuesday night with a gadget which we might call an "applauseograph," for lack of the technical name. Six contestants tried out for three places in the first half of the show, winners sang and played in the second. A cute stunt with a couple of weak points.

First of all, as someone said at the broadcast, if the talent is to be selected by the "applauseograph," what is the need for judges? The second weak point was expressed by Sidney whose capable musicians furnish the music for the show.

Said Sidney:

"A measurement of applause after each number isn't fair to the performer, because of the psychology of applauding. People will naturally give a big hand to the first number; or to the fastest or loudest number, or to a popular selection, regardless of the singer's ability.

"Why not audition three contestants, call off their names and measure the applause after each name? In that way the audience will give a contestant a fair judgment and not a spontaneous reaction."

Besides, in a soundproof broadcasting studio, the singer's voice, unless it is exceptionally loud, is lost before it reaches the other end of the room. How can an audience, then, hear or much less judge a singer whose voice is inaudible four feet away from the mike?

Of course, final winners are picked by mail vote or the radio listeners—a much better method.

State Association to Act on Pension Rules Amendments.

About 1,200 to Attend Three-Day Rally Opening Today.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Md., June 18.—The executive committee of the Maryland State Firemen's Association tonight drafted amendments to its by-laws affecting pension funds. The amendments will be submitted at the association's annual convention, which opens tomorrow.

The changes were necessitated by a 1935 State law which increased the pension fund to $20,321 and provided for higher payments to firemen injured in line of duty or to survivors of firemen killed in line of duty.

The forty-fifth annual convention will be in session three days, with more than 1,200 persons expected to attend. Delegates will be sent from most of the 155 fire companies in the State and some out-of-State companies.

Reservations include Westminster, 60; Hyattsville, 125, and Brunswick, Mount Rainier, Annapolis, West Annapolis and Easton, between 20 and 30 delegates.

The program calls for registration at 9 a. m. tomorrow, with business sessions opening the convention in the afternoon. Mayor Grover C. Stemple, of Oakland, will deliver an address of welcome.

Sightseeing tours in Garrett County are scheduled. A parade of equipment and personnel and the awarding of prizes will be held Friday. Awards will be made for the best equipment, best uniformed company, best auxiliary, largest out-of-State company, best out-of-State equipment, largest representation, best drilled company, engine hook-up and best band.

As an aid in handling traffic, the Oakland department's convention committee has requested residents to leave their automobiles at home during the two days the convention is in session.

Autoist Cleared In Fatal Accident

Trucker, Held Indirectly Responsible, Is Fined.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 18.—A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury here yesterday in the death of Samuel Shanholtz, 54, who died Saturday of injuries received when struck by an automobile. Shanholtz was standing on the highway at Johnstown, near here, talking to two men in a truck when he was struck.

The jury held Shanholtz was killed by the automobile driven by James H. Jones, of this county, but that Leslie M. Dick, of Cherry Run, W. Va., was partly at fault because he stopped his truck, without lights, on a hill. A dozen witnesses testified at the inquest.

After the inquest Dick pleaded guilty to driving a car while intoxicated, and was fined $100 and costs. E. R. Courtney, owner of the truck, pleaded guilty to permitting the truck to be operated by an intoxicated man and was assessed a similar fine. In addition to the fines and costs the license and registration plates of Courtney and Dick were revoked and the truck was impounded for six months.

Hulk in the York River Believed British Frigate of Revolution

The Guadaloupe Was Sunk to Prevent Capture by De Grasse.

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., June 18.—Floyd B. Flickinger, director of the Colonial National Monument, today reported discovery in the York River of a hulk believed to be that of the H. M. S. Guadaloupe, British frigate which was sunk on the Gloucester side of the stream during the siege of Yorktown.

He said that the ship will be somewhat difficult to identify, since it has been 3 fathoms below the surface since 1761.

The frigate carried about 38 guns, and according to Revolutionary War reports and charts was one of ten war vessels stationed to the south and east of Gloucester Point during the siege. It was sunk at its moorings by the British to prevent its capture by the French fleet under De Grasse.

Divers already have located a number of sunken vessels on the Yorktown side of the river, including the hulk of the Charon, a 44-gun ship that was burned by hot-shot fired into it by French batteries during the latter stages of the siege. They brought up many relics, including guns, bottles, metal ware and some wooden objects which resisted decay in the river mud.

Meanwhile, archeologists excavating at Jamestown, have uncovered a considerable amount of tulipware pottery and have been able to restore several bowls, pitchers and other pieces. The tulipware, manufactured in Holland and, after the accession of William and Mary, in England, definitely dates several of the homes now being studied.

Winchester Moves To Cut Relief Rolls

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, June 18.—A meeting was held here today to launch a program designed to decrease the relief rolls by what was termed "rational re-employment." The program is to be patterned along lines suggested by Gov. George C. Peery in a recent radio address.

"The time has come," persons in charge of the campaign said, "for new stimulation, but not for artificial stimulation as found in direct and work relief. We must find regular jobs for those in need of work."

A representative group attended, including Miss Dorothy K. Smith, of Front Royal, area relief administrator; heads of the school systems of the city and Frederick County, members of the board of supervisors and of city council, welfare workers and others.

Gale Unroofs Score of Houses At Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., June 18.—A score or more buildings in Hagerstown and Washington County were unroofed by a gale that struck suddenly during a thunderstorm late today. Highways and streets were blocked by trees and poles, carried down by the tremendous force of the wind.

The storm started shortly before 6 p. m. and swept across the country, from near Sharpsburg across the southern to the northeastern section of this city, lifting roofs from buildings and snapping off trees by the hundreds.

The roof of the Woodmen of the World Building in the business section was ripped off and dropped into the street, narrowly missing a number of people. Roofs of the Forsythe Storage Building, the Spessard garage and apartment building, the home of James Bowers, the home of Mrs. A. V. Doyle, the barn of Grover Sprecker and of a silo near Sharpsburg were all carried away. A number of fruit trees also were uprooted.

Scores of trees in the grounds of the Washington County Hospital and Rose Hill Cemetery were snapped off. The Sharpsburg-Williamsport pike was blocked by fallen poles and trees and traffic was being rerouted tonight.

Richmond Man Given 10 Years For Drunken Shooting of Wife

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 18.—William F. Whiteside was under sentence today to serve ten years in the State Penitentiary for shooting his wife, Mrs. Alice Satterfield Whiteside, at her dance studio here on February 2.

A jury in hustings court yesterday required only 15 minutes' deliberation to find the defendant guilty and Judge John L. Ingram immediately meted out the maximum sentence under Virginia law for malicious wounding.

Whiteside, his only witness, told the court he recollected what had happened just before and after the shooting, but said his mind was a blank as to the firing of the shots from a .32-caliber pistol that sent his wife to a hospital for a 15-week battle for her life. He admitted he had been drinking heavily.

Other witnesses related how he had arrived at the studio and fired at his wife, Mrs. Whiteside, who had instituted divorce proceedings a month prior to the shooting, said she "was terrified" of her husband.

Pension Levies Are Surveyed In Free State

Extent of County Expenses Sought as Basis of New System.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 18.—Steps to determine which counties levied for old-age pensions during this fiscal year were taken today at a meeting of the board of State aid and charities.

The board, aside from telegraphing each board of county commissioners to find out which had levied for the pensions, took no action towards setting up machinery for administration of the pension system. It was pointed out that little can be done until it is determined just what local contributions can be expected.

"We are forced to go slow because the pensions are brand-new," explained Chairman Samuel S. Shannahan following the meeting. He said replies were expected from all the counties in the near future and that the board would meet again within a week.

It is not expected, however, that any machinery for administration of the pension system will be set up before next month.

Gov. Nice was in Washington today and could not attend the meeting.

The 1935 act providing for the pensions became effective June 1, but it is not regarded as likely that payment will begin before late this year. The State is to bear two-thirds of the cost and local units one-third.

Any contributions from the Federal Government will be used to lower the cost to the State and local units.

Persons over 65 years of age will be eligible for the pensions up to $1 a day, but must prove actual need to receive them.

The State has allotted $1,500,000 for one year for the pensions. The money is to come from revenue from the 1 per cent gross receipts tax, which is limited to a year, and which is now the subject of a court hearing in which its constitutionality was attacked.

Gen. Sam Houston Enshrined Among the 'Great Virginians'

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 18.—Sam Houston, soldier, president of a republic, governor of two States and their Representative in Congress, and one of "the map makers of destiny," was enshrined in the Pantheon of his native State today as a "great Virginian."

Tgo Governors, a former Governor and descendants of the Virginian who won distinction in Tennessee and Texas were present as a bronze bust of Houston was unveiled by a great-great-granddaughter in the old Hall of Delegates of the Capitol here.

Telegrams acknowledging interest in the event were received from President Roosevelt and Jesse H. Jones, prominent Texan and chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation board.

Gov. George C. Peery presided at the exercises and introduced Gov. Hill McAlister of Tennessee and former Gov. Pat M. Neff of Texas, who joined a crowd of several hundred in the historic hall to do homage to the memory of Houston.

The prinicpal address was delivered by Dr. Francis Pendleton Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University at Lexington, near Rockbridge, the birthplace of his subject.

The bust was unveiled when little Miss Madge Houston Thornall, descendant of Gen. Houston, drew the cord that dropped a curtain concealing the statue, donated to Virginia by Mrs. Malcolm W. Perkins, of Fluvanna County, Va., and Houston, Tex., and cast by F. William Sievers, of Richmond.

Mrs. Perkins and Mr. Sievers, both descendants of the noted soldier and statesman, were introduced by Gov. Peery.

Women Urged To Help Bring Power to Farms

U. of Maryland Extension Director Cites Need for Electrification.

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., June 18.—Cooperation of farm women in promoting the program of electrification of farm homes was urged today by Dr. Thomas B. Symons, director of the University of Maryland extension service.

Dr. Symons, in addressing the opening session of the thirtieth annual rural women's short course sponsored by the extension service of the university, pointed out that the most important improvements from electrification are refrigeration, telephone service and power for heavy work.

He also pointed out that a survey made by A. V. Krewatch, extension service specialist, indicate that 1,000 miles of additional rural power lines would be needed in the 23 counties of the State to provide adequate electric power for all the farmhouses.

The agricultural adjustment act was credited by Dr. A. W. Gilbert, of the Department of Agriculture, with benefitting industry as well as agriculture.

Quoting from the department's statistics, Dr. Gilbert said a recent survey showed that there has been a 40 per cent increase in carloadings from Northeastern States, indicating "the AAA is helping in the East as well as the West and Southwest."

Major Wright Sets Up Police Insurance Plan

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 18.—With an unexpended balance of $19,354 from a State appropriation, Maj. J. Purdon Wright, superintendent of the Maryland State police, today set up his plan for the organization to carry its own compensation insurance.

Using the $19,354 as the capital until October 1, when an additional $25,000 will be available, Maj. Wright also announced the inauguration of a number of safety measures to reduce the probability of accidents among the State policemen.

Protests Received.

A number of protests from insurance brokers were received by Maj. Wright, he said, but after consulting the State insurance commissioner and the State industrial accident commission and receiving their approval, he was putting the plan in effect.

The superintendent said the operation of the plan in providing financial protection for State policemen and the possibility of saving the State a considerable sum of money was his own responsibility.

The principal safety innovations will be the use of automobiles by the patrolmen in place of motorcycles during slippery weather and for night patrol duty. The majority of fatal accidents to patrolmen in the past have occurred at night or during inclement weather.

Sobriety Demanded.

Maj. Wright said more rigid physical examinations will be given the men on active duty to eliminate accident hazards in the form of eye strain and physical weaknesses and the men also will be hand-picked for sobriety. Any man found using intoxicants, he added, will be promptly dismissed.

Under the provisions of the insurance plan, the department will pay for all medical attention and hospitalization of the men and for their compensation while off duty because of injuries. The cooperation of county physicians in all localities also will be sought to give prompt medical aid to officers in case of accidents.

Group Leaves for Course.

Virginia Set To Undertake Work Relief

Program Ready Without State Legislation, Says Official.

50,000 Needy Due to Start Work When Set-Up Gets Approval.

By the Associated Press.

William A. Smith, works progress administrator for Virginia, said last night full Virginia participation under the $4,880,000,000 works relief program would be possible without additional State legislation.

Smith said, as the situation has developed in the first two days of Federal Relief Director Harry Hopkins' conference with the new works administrators from all over the country, "it appears that the State is ready to start the new program" without any action by the General Assembly, in either a special session or in the regular session scheduled for next January.

No Legislation Needed.

"Of course," said Smith, "if the State desires to embark upon a public building program of its own, such as the construction of a new State office building, with PWA funds, it will have to find its matching money somewhere, but under the program which we have worked out no legislation is necessary."

The program has not been officially approved by Federal authorities, but it has been the subject of several conferences and may get some definite action before Smith returns to Richmond.

The program contemplates putting to work practically the entire Virginia relief case load of 50,000.

$1,100 Per Man Year.

Smith has estimated, unofficially, that Federal allotments for the program will amount to an average of approximately $900 per man year. This is to be supplemented, he said, by whatever is put up in the State and localities on PWA projects and the like. The supplemented figure in Virginia is expected by the State relief authorities to approach the $1,100 figure mentioned by President Roosevelt as the national average for the man year. The Virginia director explained that the Virginia allotment from the Federal Government probaby will fall below the national average while those in other States "especially to the north" may go above.

Smith, at the end of the second day of the three-day conference, was still enthusiastic over the Virginia program worked out under the direction of John Galleher, new State NEC director. It coordinates all of the Federal relief activities in the State.

Rural Rehabilitation To Go Out of VERA

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 18.—Rural rehabilitation will cease to be a branch of the Virginia Emergency Relief Administration after July 1, H. H. Gordon, State rehabilitation director, was advised today in a telegram from Harry Hopkins, FERA chief.

After that date, the division will be incorporated in the new rural resettlement administration, which is headed by Rexford G. Tugwell, Subsistence homesteads and the program of relocating families from submarginal lands also will come under the new agency, it was said.

Approximately 3,750 families have already been accepted for full rehabilitation in Virginia, Mr. Gordon said, and applications of 250 others are being investigated.

Classics of Literature Continue to Be Eagerly Studied for Screen Material

Old Favorites Being Revived Before Camera

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

No end is yet in sight of the prevalent cycle of motion pictures adapted from the classics. Something was said in this space yesterday concerning the sudden "discovery" of Shakespeare by both the movie producers and the movie patrons, but Shakespeare is only a beginning.

Having terminated his first cinema adventure with the completion of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," it is highly probable that Max Reinhardt will film "Twelfth Night," following a living presentation of the Shakespeare work in the Hollywood Bowl this fall.

Even "The Charge of the Light Brigade"—and it is understood that this does not refer to the monthly gas or electric bill—is to be enacted for the cameras at Warner Brothers as the climax of an elaborate military drama dealing with the Crimean War.

At RKO-Radio, Katharine Hepburn, having been done none too well by in "Break of Hearts," is contemplating one or the other—or perhaps both—of Sir James Matthew Barrie's subtly whimiscal "Quality Street," played in 1903 on the stage by Maude Adams, and a new screen version of "Joan of Arc."

Kipling Takes a Hand.

It is planned at Paramount to star Gary Cooper, who of late has disclosed symptoms of becoming an actor, in Kipling's "The Light That Failed." It is reported that Mr. Kipling is having a bit to say about the screen transcription of his story, having been visited recently in England by Arthur Hornblow, the producer.

"Ivanhoe," the subject of countless labored high school book reviews and essays, is to be made on a prodigious scale by Twentieth Century under the new set-up, whereby that company becomes the second half of the hyphenated Fox-Twentieth Century coalition. According to advance rumors — they are scarcely more than that at the moment—"Ivanhoe" will surpass "Les Miserables" in magnitude.

Greta Garbo will be coming along soon in "Anna Karenina," by Count Leo Tolstoy, and "Peter Ibbetson" is planned as a co-starring vehicle for Gary Cooper and Ann Harding, with John Halliday leading the support.

Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Suicide Club" has been snapped up by Universal and a semi-operatic production of "Samson and Delilah" is in contemplation as a Cecil B. De Mille production.

More Dickens.

Then at regular intervals there bobs up the perennial rumor about Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities."

Other old reliable wheel-horses to be trotted out again and remade by modern methods are "An Old-Fashioned Girl," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame"—one of the late Lon Chaney's most noteworthy demonstrations of the wizardry of make-up—and "The Last Days of Pompeii."

More and more, stories formerly limited in appeal and interest largely to scholars, esthetes, professors of literature and the like are being turned over to the adventurous experimentation of the adaptors and scenario writers.

You may not recognize many of them when they come out, but, at least, the titles will be familiar.

Among yesterday's callers we were glad to see were Charles Squires, the eminent scenic artist, whose handiwork has played so important a part in causing Impresario Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players to be known as one of the foremost, all-around acting and producing groups in America; Ed Holland, in town only for a day, to sow a few seeds that he hopes will grow into added publicity for "Becky Sharp," opening on the screen at RKO-Keith's tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, and Al Tamarin, erstwhile manager of the Belasco Theater, who, with the closing of the house for the summer, is returning to New York to ally himself with another house on the chain operated by Matty Radin, with an upstate vacation in prospect for a little later. Mr. Tamarin confirms our belief that the Belasco's first season as an outlet for foreign-made film product has been a financial success. With such engagements as "Chapayev," George Arliss in "The Iron Duke" and Helen Chandler, Marta Eggerth and Hans Jaray in "The Unfinished Symphony," punctuating its season at almost regular intervals, it could not be anything else, low cost of operation considered.

Actress Wins Honors.

Eva Le Gallienne, who comes to the stage of Loew's Fox Theater on Friday for a week of personal appearances in the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet," has won distinction over and above that which attaches merely to the title of one of the American theater's foremost actress-producers. She is the proud possessor of many honors conferred upon her by institutions of learning and organizations offering awards for outstanding achievement.

Her most recent honor came from the Town Hall Club of New York, which presents an annual award "to the member who has made the most conspicuous contribution to the enlargement and enrichment of life." Runners-up for this honor this year in the membership voting were Arthur Bodansky, conductor of the Metropolitan Opera; Dr. Glen Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, and Deems Taylor, noted composer.

Tufts Was First.

The first school to honor Eva Le Gallienne, founder of the Civic Repertory Theater, was Tufts College, which made her a master of arts.

Having won this M. A., Miss Le Gallienne, without being aware of the fact, went on to win doctorates. This she did twice in a single year.

She became doctor of letters on the record books of Russel Sage College and doctor of humane letters at Smith College. In 1933, Miss Le Gallienne again came forward to receive academic honors, this time from Brown University, which conferred a Litt. D., upon her.

Another award which this distinguished young artiste has received was the Pictorial Review prize of $5,000, which she won as a "woman of outstanding achievement." She spent this money, incidentally, to install new seats in her Civic Repertory Theater in New York, an indication of the unselfish spirit she has brought to the theater.

An old friend of many Washington theatergoers is coming to the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday. This would be Donald Woods, former leading man of the National Theater Players, who appears in support of Kay Francis and George Brent in "Stranded." If your memory needs refreshing, Donald Woods was born Ralph Zink in Winnipeg, Ontario, but came to the United States with his mother while still a small boy. He attended the University of California and received his first training for the stage in college theatricals. He began his professional career in a stock company in Salt Lake City, Utah. His experience includes two Broadway plays, "Singapore," in which he played the lead opposite Suzanne Caubet, and "Social Register," opposite Edna Hibbard. His first picture was "As the Earth Turns;" his latest, needless to say, "Stranded."

Robinson Goes to "Coast."

Samuel Goldwyn has signed Edward G. Robinson for one of the lead roles with Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea in his forthcoming production of "Barbary Coast." The picture, dealing with the colorfully youthful days of California, will be directed by Howard Hawks.

The role assigned Robinson is said to be one of the most ambitious he has essayed since his characterization of the title figure in "Little Caesar." He will play the part of a political boss, exemplifying the ominous qualities of what was something in the nature of a "public enemy" in those early days, when love and gold were the dominating factors in the lives of men.

The signing of Robinson for this Goldwyn chore was made possible under an agreement whereby the actor is permitted to make one film away from the Warner Brothers' studio, his "home lot."

"Barbary Coast," concerning which there was a little speculative eyebrow-lifting just about a year ago, will go before the cameras within two weeks.

Gladys Swarthout, radio and grand opera star—or vice versa—will play a dual role when she makes her screen debut in a new celluloid version of "The Rose of the Rancho," the Richard Walton Tully-David Belasco stage play in which Frances Starr made her first stellar appearance under Belasco's management. Miss Swarthout will appear as both the belle of the rancho and the leader of the Vigilantes engaged in the exciting business of running down cattle rustlers. The only member the cast with screen experience is John Boles, all the rest having been recruited from the Broadway stage. "The Rose of the Rancho" was first filmed by Cecil B. De Mille in 1914, with Bessie Barriscale as star.

"Going Native" Again.

Auditions for the third annual All Washington revue titled "Going Native," will begin on Monday, July 1, Carter Barron, Loew's divisional manager, and Gene Ford, producer of the show, announced last night after a long distance telephone conference.

The first audition will be held on the evening of July 1 and continued all day on Tuesday and Wednesday, July 2 and 3. As yet no place for the auditons has been selected, but this will be announced within a day or two.

Under the plans formulated by the Messrs. Barron and Ford, a fast moving revue, with several elaborate production numbers, utilizing a large dancing chorus under the direction of Marjorie Hartoin, who did such an excellent job last year, will be put on. There also will be an outstanding personality recruited for the revue, who will be announced later.

Everyone who lives in Washington or its suburbs is urged to attend the auditions. Anyone over 18 years of age is eligible.

Must Be Auditioned.

Each participant in the revue will be paid a professional salary and all must appear at the public auditions as no selection of talent will be made privately.

Singers, dancers, comedians, instrumentalists, magicians, mimics, everybody with talent, are urged to participate in the auditions.

As the result of their work in last year's "Going Native," several members of the cast received contracts for professional engagements in night clubs and on the vaudeville stage outside Washington.

Application blanks for the audition are now being printed and will be available at Loew's Fox, Palace and Columbia theaters and from the dramatic editor of this paper. Signed applications should be addressed to Gene Ford, Manager, Loew's Fox.

Two sons and a daughter of famous theatrical families—Mary Rogers, Keenan Wynn and Owen Davis, jr.—were in the cast of "Accent on Youth," which opened in the Lakewood Theater, Skowhegan, Me., last night. Keenan Wynn is the son of "Firechief" Ed Wynn, and grandson of Frank Keenan, famous character actor of the stage. Last night marked his stage debut. Mary Rogers, of course, is Will's daughter, who made her debut at the National here last season, and Owen Davis, jr., is son of the Pulitzer prize-winning playwright whose name he bears. He is the veteran of the lot, having acted for several years—one spring as juvenile with the National Theater Players.

Biting-the-Dust Note.

Ted Crosby, brother of Bing, Tacoma, Wash., newspaperman, covered the Weyerhaeuser kidnaping. Imagine his embarrassment when he discovered the young victim of the mobsters had been hidden within six blocks of the Crosby home for six days!

One kidnaping and one kid napping, as you might say!

A Child Star Comes to Maturity

Establishing herself as a competent actress while still a small child, first on the stage and later in pictures, Anita Louise has matured into one of the cinema's most beautiful blondes, as conclusively evidenced by this stunning new portrait study by Ference, famous Viennese photographer. This charming young actress, just 20, next will be seen in the Max Reinhardt production of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," soon to be released by Warner Brothers.

Mr. Robert Burbank at the piano.

At last Washington has a "barn" theater in fact as well as name.

Having had their old "shoeheel factory" sold out from under them last fall, the Roadside Theater group forthwith secured a picturesque old barn of ample dimensions and height, closer to town than the former site, and more easily accessible, and last night launched their second summer season with a revival of that sturdy old melodrama, "After Dark, or Not Maid, Wife or Widow."

Unlike the former "barn" theater, which wasn't a barn at all, and never had been, the present Roadside Theater provides a second-floor auditorium that is wide and shallow, thus affording even those in the last row of seats excellent vantage points for both seeing and hearing—if not actually believing—all that goes on on the stage, which, incidentally, seems to be about twice the size of the old one.

Needs Speeding Up.

Last night's performance of the famous Dion Boucicault melo of the seamy life in London, while letter-perfect, lacked the speed and snap in execution that characterized last season's essays at similar quaint old pieces. Perhaps this impression was aggravated by the long waits between scenes, some of which even exceeded in length the scene that followed after the parting of the curtains—somewhat recalcitrant on their own account last evening. Those revolving stages must not have been working.

For all its lethargy, however, "After Dark" afforded ample opportunity for hissing the villian, played with rather more than usual deliberateness by that able young actor, Eugene Kressin, and cheering the hero, impersonated with utmost seriousness by Ralph Fowler.

The acting honors of the evening, everything considered, easily went to Thomas M. Cahill in the role of Old Tom, "one who has seen better days and will again," a gin-soaked derelict, who has fallen from high places to life among the human dregs along London's waterfront. It seems that Richard Knatchbull had stolen his wife and daughter some years before, later tricked the girl out of a legal marriage, ostensibly to save her husband from disgrace, and the blow toppled "Old Tom" out of his army commission into a life of penury and begging. It is a role requiring sympathy, understanding and the knack of character building—qualities with which Mr. Cahill imbued it in abundance. His was the dominant performance of the evening.

Support Is Competent.

Water McIntosh, as Sir Gordon Chumley, an old army pal of "Old Tom's;" William Phillips, as Dicey Morris, gambling and dance hall proprietor, and Milton O. Hershfield, briefly cast as a policeman, afforded capable support.

The two leading feminine roles are well played by Cary Lucas, as the buffeted young woman of the play's subtitle, and Janet Coon, the young lady who almost married her undivorced husband, who thought his wife had managed the tragic item of suicide by leaping off Waterloo Bridge.

The run of "After Dark" is scheduled for two weeks and once it gets going a little more briskly and a little more smoothly it will be good fun, just as all of the Roadsiders' melodramas have been.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Babies at Work.

Hollywood, June 18.

THIS seems to be "kind to parents week," for the kiddies are at work trying to earn a few pennies. Shirley Temple is busy at the Fox factory making a product which is labeled "Curly Top." She is to play a scene with John Boles. Director Irving Cummings sits on a stool directly beneath the camera, and gives his instructions to Shirley. On another stool to the rear of Director Cummings, sits Mrs. Temple. Director Cummings, when he talks to Shirley, speaks in a softer tone and almost talks baby talk.

Shirley has learned much from her work in pictures. She seems more certain of herself; she seems to know what she is doing. She knows tricks, she has perfected timing, and she has learned to look toward a director for instructions. After playing every scene she looks toward the director and her mother for approval. Regardless of what others say, if she gets a smile from her mother, Shirley knows she has done okay.

• • • •

John Boles and Shirley play this scene many times before Director Cummings is satisfied. It is generally Boles who blows the scene. Shirley goes up in her lines only when Boles changes a word in a speech. The changed word may not alter the meaning of the line, but Shirley knows the speech as it is written and demands to hear it that way. Shirley becomes more comfortable every time the scene is displayed. During a tender portion of Boles' speech, Shirley lets her fingers glide over Boles' fingers. She looks toward Director Cummings, believing she might have spoiled the scene. Cummings says: "Keep that in, Shirley. Do it again when we shoot it. It's very effective." And that is how a Shirley Temple gesture gets into a picture.

• • • •

EVERY studio tried to get a Shirley Temple after her quick success, and many of them are still searching. Warners have a babe at work in "The Little Big Shot," and hope she is another Shirley.

Their entry in the baby parade is Sybil Jason. Sybil hails from Africa, and worked in several pictures in London. She didn't create any sensation, but she is expected to, for possibilities were noted by the way she played the small roles assigned to her. Sybil is taller and firmer than Shirley, although she is supposed to be only 6 years old. Sybil Jason has dark brown hair, and the most attractive part about her is her large brown eyes. She seems certain of herself while playing a scene.

Sybil Jason also has her guide on the set, and looks toward this person for approval, regardless of what Director Michael Curtiz may say.

She looks toward her uncle, Harry Jacobson, for advice and approval. Her sister, Nita Jason, is also on the set. Her mother, so Mr. Jacobson said, is in Africa. It does seem strange that she shouldn't come with her daughter to Hollywood, but concerning this all Mr. Jacobson would say is: "I am handling Sybil's career and taking care of things."

• • • •

MERLE OBERON, Frederick March and Herbert Marshall are performing in "The Dark Angel," but the real show, this day, is Director Sidney Franklin. Mr. Franklin is a good director, who has done many fine things on the screen, but he seems to be more stage frightened than the actors. Or perhaps it is all Anna Sten's fault and she doesn't know about it.

Mr. Franklin is directing on the same sound stage where Anna Sten worked for Sam Goldwyn. The set of screens which hide Miss Sten from view lean against a corner wall. Mr. Franklin decides that he doesn't want people to watch him work; it makes him nervous. He orders the property man to place the screens about him and the set. Only the performers and the cameraman will really see him at work. Mr. Franklin does a Sten for half a day, but the screens hem him in. The small set—there is a fireplace burning—becomes very warm and soon Mr. Franklin yearns for the open spaces and a breeze. He orders the stage hands to take the screens away; being temperamental is too uncomfortable.

• • • •

Mr. Franklin goes on with his flicker, and now there is a sequence which is too large for screens, even if he desired them. It is the railroad station at Folkestone, and the English soldiers are getting ready to leave for the war front. Hundreds of extras in British uniforms march under the hot studio lights. Among them are many extras who actually served in the British army and are now making $7.50 for the day because they are fortunate enough to have a genuine uniform. These war veterans were given the first call.

While waiting for a camera set-up, the extras fall into groups and chat. One soldier says: "It's hot under these lights, especially when you have to keep marching and marching for hours." This annoys another soldier. "You think this is bad. You're lucky you're marching into a camera and not a machine gun." He walks away.

Road Work Halted In Carroll County

Funds Will Be Available in October.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminister, Md., June 18.—After a conference with the State Road Commission, the Carroll County commissioners announced yesterday that no new roads will be constructed in Carroll County until October 1.

Two sections of road, both macadam, are now under construction in the county, at Marston and Harney. According to the commissioners, it was planned to construct other roads this summer if a $41,000 balance due the county under last year's appropriation had been available.

This balance, it was revealed, although included in a $194,000 appropriation to the county, will not be available until October. The county commissioners asserted that under a new ruling of the commission, future new roads must not cost more than $6,000.

Other economy rulings affecting road construction are that new roads must follow the old road beds, and that no extensive grading will be done.

Model Plane League To Award 18 Prizes

Eighteen prizes will be awarded at the end of the contest of the District Model Aircraft League which opens today at the new National Museum. The exhibition will continue through June 29, under the direction of J. H. Williams, supervisor of aircraft for the league. Models will be grouped in six general classes under junior and senior groups, with 16 years set as the dividing line.

Arlington Road Improvements To Be Pushed

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 309. Clarendon, Va.

Declaring the roads in Arlington County are in a deplorable condition, the board of directors of the Arlington County Chamber of Commerce at its meeting held last night at Clarendon voted to take the matter up with County Manager Roy S. Braden at once.

Although it has been reported that the county road funds are low and the beginning of the new fiscal year which starts July 1 is awaited it was contended that the county would do well to borrow funds and start the work now when weather conditions are good.

Members of the board pointed out that little or no consideration is being given to the location of apartment houses in the county and that the zoning ordinance should be so strengthened that it can not be changed to permit apartments where some are now being erected. Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas will be asked to attend the conference.

The board refusing to consider the resignation of President George M. Yeatman, he consented to continue in office after assurance was given that more co-operation will be given by the members of the board of directors.

It was voted to recess during July and August.

Plans to start registration for summer classes in the public schools in the county Monday at 8 a. m., have been completed, according to an announcement made yesterday by County Commissioner Fletcher Kemp.

Those planning to attend may register at the following schools: Washington-Lee High School, Nellie Custis School at Aurora Hills, Patrick Henry School at Arlington, Clarendon School, James Monroe School at Aurora Heights, Cherrydale School and Kemp (colored) School.

Superintendent Kemp says the number of pupils registering will determine whether all the abovementioned schools will open.

Leopold V. Freudberg, instructor at the Washington College of Law, will speak at the meeting of the Arlington County Business and Professional Women's Club tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at the Washington Golf and Country Club. He will speak on "Planning Your Financial Independence."

Mr. Freudberg is a member of the Million Dollar Round Table of the National Association of Life Underwriters.

The program will be in charge of Mrs. Linda Cost, chairman of the finance committee.

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Jefferson Fire Department will sponsor a benefit bingo party tonight in the community hall at Virginia Highlands.

The committee in charge of arrangements consists of Mrs. Karl H. Noe and Mrs. Edgar Gaiber.

With hundreds of citizens, including practically all the candidates seeking office in Arlington County, attending the annual carnival being given by the Arlington Fire Department, the committee announces special added attractions for tonight.

The carnival is being staged on the lot at the intersection of Columbia pike and Bingham road. It will continue through Saturday night. The feature attraction Saturday afternoon will be the annual baseball game between the county police and the Arlington Fire Department.

The Fidelis Circle of St. George's Episcopal Church will hold a luncheon meeting today at 1 o'clock at the home of Mrs. E. Lester Bennett, 136 North Spruce street, Lyon Village.

Citizen Association Protests Phone Service at Merrifield

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The Merrifield Improvement Association has protested against the type of telephone service the community receives. At its regular meeting last night the secretary was instructed to write the telephone company inquiring why better service is not furnished on rural lines.

Members of the association declared that they had no complaint against the local telephone operators, but they did protest against the system which failed to provide sufficient operators to handle the calls during the rush hours. Many of the subscribers on party lines stated that it has become necessary to ring many times before the operator has time to answer their calls.

A letter was ordered sent to Resident Engineer R. I. Mount, of the State highway system asking that funds be allocated for the improvement of Prosperity avenue at Merrifield as soon as the State appropriations become available on July 1.

The entertainment committee will meet tomorrow night to make plans for the annual all-day picnic of the association. This committee has been instructed to plan a benefit for the Volunteer Fire Department of Falls Church and Fairfax in the fall.

Raymond Ball was elected president of McLean Council, Order of Fraternal Americans, at the annual meeting this month. Jesse Dailey was elected vice president; Hershell E. Wright, financial secretary; Austin D. Thompson, recording secretary; Samuel W. Darne, treasurer; Claude A. Grubb, assistant financial secretary; Ralph Darne, assistant recording secretary; Charles H. Furlong, chaplain; Ralph Thompson, inner guard; Edward L. Heath, jr., outer guard; Edward Heath, sr., warden.

The last of the series of dances sponsored by the Oakton School and Civic League to raise funds for welfare work will be held Friday night in the school auditorium. The league during the past year has furnished free milk at noon to all children whose parents were unable to pay, at a cost of $103.90. Forty dollars was also spent for dental work in the school. Both projects have been financed by the proceeds of the monthly dances. The officers hope that Friday's dance will clear a substantial sum with which to start similar work next fall.

California Crew Defeats Cornell by Split Second on Hudson

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

I'VE never heard of bookmakers by appointment to the Crown, but Messrs. Baldwin and Powell, of St. Paul's Churchyard, London, are taking their work seriously enough to merit the distinction. There comes to hand a batch of literature from these betting commissioners anent the British Open that sets a new high for candidness on golf gambling.

POVICH.

Messrs. Baldwin and Powell are very businesslike about it all. They refer you with some pride to their bankers—Barclay's Bank, Ltd., who, they say, will vouch for their reliability, stability and ability to pay off their bets. And then they list for you odds on 55 players who are conceded a chance to win when the firing starts at Murifield day after tomorrow.

Wagering is conducted by them on a set form listed under the sub-title, "Conditions of Business," as follows:

1—All wagers are made by us that the player does not win outright, whether he enters, plays or not.

2—There is no limit to the sum that may be wagered, but all wagers in excess of $1,000 should be telegraphed or cabled.

3—Confirmatory vouchers will be sent upon receipt of wagers.

5—Settlement of all winning wagers will be posted by us on the day following the final.

All of which, to this department, seems fair enough. I like that line, "There is no limit to the sum that may be wagered." Any firm that is prepared to make book on that basis apparently is in a position to back its bets with the coin of the realm. There's no hedging there, eh, Watson?

BALDWIN and Powell have been laying the lowest odds on Henry Cotton, the British-bred Belgian pro, who is quoted as the favorite at 10 to 1, and according to the firm's literature, all prices quoted hold good until June 20. But the failure of the American stars, Gene Sarazen, Walter Hagen, Paul Runyan, Horton and McDonald Smith, Bobby Cruickshank, and Tommy Armour, to enter may leave Baldwin and Powell holding the bag with their odds, and I don't mean the golf bag.

The firm's odds were based on the presence of these half-dozen U. S. stars in the field, and, thus, in their absence, the odds quoted leave several in the field muchly overlaid. Particularly do Baldwin and Powell appear to have made a grievous mistake when they grouped all players not listed among their 55 in the 100-to-1-shot class.

Because, among those against whom they did not quote a specific price and who can now be had at 100 to 1 is young Henry Picard, the Hershey, Pa., pro, who is being sent abroad by the Hershey Chocolate Interests. Any American pro will tell you that Picard is no 100-to-1 shot, no more than a 25-to-1 shot in any tournament, much less the British Open with the cream of America's pro crop absent.

Sid Brews, the South African pro, was rated with McDonald Smith and Gene Sarazen as the second choices at 15 to 1, but there is very little evidence of wagering on him. Baldwin and Powell accorded Lawson Little a distinct honor when they priced him as a 20-to-1 shot, the lowest odds ever offered against any amateur, with the exception of Bobby Jones, in recent years.

SPEAKING of golf, as this department appears to be doing this morning, it has long been apparent that the hole-in-one no longer rates the respect it used to command. With the game now widespread and the number of golfers doubled during the past 15 years, the ace has lost caste as an achievement by its very frequency.

Time was when you could look up from your desk in the sports department, watch a visitor walk in, note the gleam in his eye, the traces of a smile playing about his lips, and wager in almost perfect safety that he had come to report a hole-in-one. Either that or he was recently presented with an eight-pound son, but in that case, he wouldn't be coming into the sports department.

The hole-in-one is now universally recognized as a stroke of pure luck. Bobby Jones will tell you that if you lay a drive a foot from the pin, that's a great shot. But if you sink that drive in the hole, why, that's luck. Nobody can have such control over the ball.

Ty Cobb used to draw a fine baseball analogy to the hole-in-one. Cobb always minimized the pitcher's skill in twirling a no-hit game. The pitcher simply had a lucky day. It wasn't in the books for him to get away with a no-hitter. But, if it was a one-hit game, ah, that was different. A pitcher had to be good to hold the enemy to one hit.

Coast Shells Sweep All 3 Races

Bears Nose Out Eastern Eight as 20,000 Cheer Losers.

Washington Is Victor in Frosh and Jayvee Competitions.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y. June 18. By the slender margin of three-fifths of a second, a scant 10 feet of deck-length, the University of California's brawny Golden Bears stood off Cornell's great closing challenge this evening and captured one of the most thrilling 4-mile varsity races ever rowed on the Hudson River.

California's third successive triumph in the big race completed the first Far Western sweep in the history of the intercollegiate championship regatta. The University of Washington scored decisive victories in both the freshmen 2-mile and the junior varsity 3-mile races.

Cornell saved the regatta from being a complete rout of the Eastern "old guard" by fighting it out with the highly favored Californians throughout the last mile. Finishing second in a race so close that it first looked as though the Ithacans had won, only to have the official stop watches register California's narrow margin of victory, Cornell left Washington's varsity struggling two lengths behind, in third place. Next in order across the finish were Navy, Syracuse, Pennsylvania, and Columbia.

Washington Crews Win.

Washington and California finished one-two in the freshman race. After the Huskies from the Pacific Northwest captured the "jayvee" race with an all-sophomore crew, the same boatload that was victorious as a freshman unit last year, they faced a great chance to make it three in a row. The unprecedented appeared to be in Washington's grasp as its varsity eight showed the way for upward of 2 miles, but the Huskies couldn't keep it up.

Rowed under rainy, chilly weather conditions, the regatta was witnessed by the smallest crowd in any year since the war. Scarcely 20,000 looked on from shores, boats and a 16-car observation train, but the finish gave them something to cheer about, even though the outcome of the varsity race was a blow to the big cheering section that had its hopes of a Cornell triumph lifted high by the gallant closing bid of the sturdy Ithacans.

Navy's big varsity boatload, stroked by burly Joe Hood, has been the Eastern choice to lead the challenge to the great Far Western crews, but first Syracuse and finally Cornell made the gestures that proved most threatening. For the first 2 miles, the varsity fleet pursued Washington, only to find California, after a slow start, coming through to justify its strong backing.

Navy Drops Back.

Navy dropped back, after a flying start, while Syracuse pulled into second place in pursuit of the high-stroking Washington eight. For a mile and a half the Orange kept within at least a length of the Huskies. Then Cornell made its first bid, stepping up the beat to pass Syracuse at the 2-mile mark. California, rowing easily, moved into third place as the Bears overhauled the Orange, besides shaking off the Navy.

Going into the third mile less than a quarter-length separated Washington, Cornell and California, rowing in that order. Gradually the Huskies yielded their early margin. For a short distance it seemed California was steadily forging ahead, but Cornell answered with a spurt that carried the big Red crew into the lead at the spidery railroad bridge making the end of the third mile.

Washington had shot its bolt, to all intents nad purposes, and it was strictly a duel between California and Cornell for the final mile. Both crews put on the pressure but neither was able to shake off the other. With a half mile to go it appeared California had a margin of a few feet.

Battle to the Finish.

Battling through the last furlong, it was still either crew's race, but with the finish within reach, California's sophomore pacemaker, Gene Berkenkamp, got just enough extra drive into the final sprint to shove the Golden Bear shell across the line a scant deck-length ahead of the Cornell boat propelled by the stroking of Don Hart, of Brooklyn.

Washington, though two lengths behind Cornell, had enough left to finish with a length margin over the Navy ni 19:00 4-5. The Midshipmen in turn were a length and a half ahead of Syracuse, which proved too light for the 4-mile grind, weakened after a good start and barely saved sixth place from Columbia. Only a fifth of a second separated the last two crews.

California's winning time, 18 minutes 52 seconds, was the second fastest in the history of the varsity race. The Golden Bears set the record when they won the 1928 race in 18:35 4-5. Only three other crews, Cornell in 1901 and 1903 and the Navy in 1931, have rowed the 4-mile course in less than 19 minutes.

Victors in Exciting Battle of Crews

St. Louis Glad As Showers Bar Game

By Lewis F. Atchison,

A Staff Correspondent.

ST. LOUIS, June 18.—The rainstorm expected yesterday finally arrived this morning, and, to say the least, was rather disappointing. But it fulfilled the fondest hopes of officials of the St. Louis Browns, who speedily postponed the final game with Washington until a later date when the Browns will have more pitchers and the fans more of an appetite for the sport.

Thus the Nats face two doubleheaders with the cellar occupants on their next swing around the circuit when need for pitchers may be even more acute than now, if such a condition could come to pass.

"Bump" Hadley, who was to have pitched the final game against St. Louis, has been assigned to the first game tomorrow and Jack Russell will work the second against Cleveland. Russell is still up in the clouds over the arrival of an heir and probably will tear his arm off to win. He has been granted a leave of absence by Manager Bucky Harris and will entrain for Washington immediately after the game.

U. S. Star Named Captain at Oxford

Virginia Rhodes Scholar to Head Track Team.

Fenton Gentry, former captain of the University of Virginia's champion boxing team and now a Rhodes Scholar, has been elected captain of the Oxford track team, the first American ever to be so honored.

Gentry, who graduated from Virginia in 1932 and returned after a year in Britain to receive a master's degree last spring, was probably the most popular student there in a decade. He fought heavyweight, made his letter in football, was president of the General Athletic Association and participated in scores of other activities. He was known for several years as "The Colonel" following an appointment to the staff of the governor of Tennessee. He is from Chattanooga.

Under the English system, Gentry will be entrusted with the job of actually selecting a track team to represent Oxford, will supervise training and have charge of various business angles.

The shotput is the only track activity he participates in. Although better than average in the event, he was always outshone at Virginia by George Coles, who consistently placed the weight several feet further than "The Colonel."

2 Americans Lose At Tennis in Britain

By the Associated Press.

London, June 18.—Two members of the visiting American contingent fell as the Queen Club tennis tournament entered the third round today.

John Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., was ushered out by Jack Lysaght, 6—4, 1—6, 6—2. Another upset was recorded in the women's division when Leila Low, second ranking player of India, eliminated Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., 6—1, 6—3.

The other Americans playing today moved up without trouble. Wilmer Allison, veteran Texan; Gene Mako and Donald Budge, both, of California, all scored.

Albany Bench Warmed by 'Alabama'

By the United Press.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 18.—Edwin (Alabama) Pitts, the paroled Sing Sing Prison inmate, "rode" the bench again tonight as Albany met Toronto in an International League doubleheader.

He worked out before the first game, however, and sent several balls far into the outfield in batting practice.

In fielding practice, Pitts, who was admitted to organized baseball through a ruling from Commissioner K. M. Landis, turned in several brilliant catches in center field.

Ariel Cross Wins In Field of Mud

Workman Continues Great Riding at Aqueduct.

By the Associated Press.

Aqueduct Race Track, N. Y., June 18.—"Sonny" Workman, one of the old guard and at present the leading American rider on a percentage basis, continued his fine riding here today when he drove G. H. Bostwick's Ariel Cross to victory in the Belle Harbor, a Class "B" handicap at six and a half furlongs. Quoted at 4 to 1, Ariel Cross waded through the slop and rain in 1:18 3-5 to register by three parts of a length.

G. W. Ogle's Patchpocket, heavily played choice at 8 to 5, just lasted to head B. M. Byers' Thorson out of second honors. It was one of the most unpleasant days of the season for the sport, only the most dyed-in-the-wool regulars disregarding the elements.

Stanford Team Bids for Golf Honors

STANFORD didn't win the Rose Bowl football game from Alabama, but the boys from the Pacific Coast are going to make a great bid for the National Intercollegiate Golf championship next week at Congressional, their revenge being the dethroning of Champion Charlie Yates, of Gawjuh Tech.

The Stanford team, six-strong, headed by their coach, Eddie Twiggs, arrived in Washington yesterday and went out to Congressional to begin a six-day practice campaign.

It is the first time Stanford has ever sent a team this far East, and the golfers expressed themselves as being pleased with the battleground. With the team were Capt. Tommy Dwyer and Jack Hoerner, Nebraska amateur champion, both of whom hold victories over Lawson Little, also of Stanford, British and American amateur champion; Verne (Spec) Stewart, Don Edwards, Morse Erskine and Geeb Halaby.

Any May Win.

Dwyer, Hoerner, Stewart and Edwards will make up the four-man team, and any one is a good bet to win the title. Hoerner went to the fourth round of the National Amateur last year, while Stewart led the Nation in the National Amateur qualifying trials.

Fischer and Kocsis and the rest of the Wolverines are in town tomorrow, as are Walter Emery, 1933 champion, and Harry Gandy, Oklahoma stars; Champion Yates and Ed White and his Texas Longhorns.

Stella Walsh Hits Back at Charges

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18. —Replying to charges that she "ran out" on Helen Stephens Fulton, Mo., school girl star at St. Louis two weeks ago, Stella Walsh, of Cleveland, holder of several women's track records, said here today she notified the sponsors of the St. Louis meet as early as May 20 she would be unable to compete.

The St. Louis Athletic Club has asked the Ozark A. A. U. to demand Miss Walsh be suspended by the national body.

Miss Walsh, who sails for Poland tomorrow to compete in a series of meets, said she was unable to keep her St. Louis engagement because of failure to obtain permission to leave school.

All Major League Games Rained Out

Owners Groan as Skys Open Over Country.

New York, June 18.—For the second time this season, the entire major league baseball schedule was washed out today.

On May 2, when only three games were scheduled, rain forced the postponements of all contests. Today, however, 14 teams were slated to get into action. The postponements struck another blow at the owners' pocketbooks, especially at Chicago, where the New York Yankees, American League leaders, and the second-place White Sox, were rained out for the third straight day, after playing only one of their five-game series.

Boston and Cincinnati were not scheduled in the National League.

Braddock Yet Is Lured by Europe

Gets $150,000 Offer to Box Schmeling on Continent.

POTSDAM, Germany, June 18.—Max Schmeling is willing to go to America for a crack at James J. Braddock's new heavyweight title, but he isn't going until every possiblity of getting Braddock into a European ring has been exhausted.

Although reluctant to do much talking, Schmeling pointed out he is under contract to Walter Rothenberg, German promoter, until September 17 and can not fight under anybody else's auspices until then even if he wanted to.

"Wait until after I fight Paulino Uzcudun," he said. "If I beat him we can lay our plans. I don't want to be caught like Max Baer was because of too much talking."

Meanwhile in Hamburg, Rothenberg, who promoted the Steve Hamas-Schmeling bout last March and whose ten months of intensive work was nullified by Baer's defeat, let it be known he is keen to bring Braddock across to meet Schmeling and will guarantee the former $150,000 to fight the German in a neutral country in September.

Offers $150,000.

He told the Associated Press he also would reimburse Braddock for any loss he might sustain by breaking his contract with the Madison Square Garden Corporation, which has him signed for the first defense of his title.

"I'll give Braddock $150,000 in cash as soon as he accepts," Rothenburg was quoted.

Close friends of Schmeling said there is no doubt Max will fight Braddock in America if Rothenburg fails to bring the champion to Europe.

New York, June 18 (AP).—Jimmy Johnston, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, who would like to stage a world's heavyweight title fight between Champion James J. Braddock and the German Max Schmeling here in September, said tonight there isn't a chance of Braddock going to Europe for his first title defense.

"We've got Braddock signed and that's all there is to it," said Johnston. "Braddock isn't thinking of breaking the contract, nor is Joe Gould, his manager."

There also is a possibility that Max Baer, the dethroned champ, will come back into the Garden fold and be given a chance to regain his title.

Dixie Golfers Are Led by Record 68

Alabama Lad Is Four Strokes Ahead at Halfway Mark.

By Dillon Graham.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

RICHMOND, Va., June 18.—Bagging seven birdies as he stormed to a new amateur course record, 20-year-old Johnny Morris, of Birmingham, fired a four-under-par 68 over the James River course of the Country Club of Virginia here today to grab a four-shot lead over the field in the first of the two-round qualification test of the Southern amateur golf championship.

The dark, good looking high school senior, who went to the semifinals of the Southern in his only appearance three years gao, equalled par's 36 over the first nine in a wierd stretch of ups and downs and then came blazing home with a spectacular 32 that might easily have been a stroke or so lower. His score was two shots better than the previous amateur figure and had his putt for an eagle on the eighteenth fallen instead of rimming the cup he would have tied Bobby Cruickshank's professional low.

Trailing Morris by four blows were Brown Rainwater, of Atlanta, and Ewing Watkins, Chattanooga veteran. Both posted par 72s over this long, wind-swept course, whose par was aided today by a blazing sun that wilted many of the competitors.

Played Jones in 1920.

Watkins, who played Bobby Jones in the Southern finals 15 years ago, played steadily for a 38—34—72, grabbing two birdies on the way home to balance the shots he lost on the first nine.

Although he scored three birdies on the first nine, Morris found enough trouble to offset his advantages and par held him to a draw. He 3-putted on the third, lost another shot on the fourth, evened up wit ha birdie on the fifth, went over on the seventh and bagged a deuce to come level again on the eighth.

The tall, black-haired youth started banging for the record on the home nine, sinking a 15-footer on the eleventh for a birdie, a 12-footer on the fourteenth for another and a 5-footer on the sixteenth for still another. He was on the long eighteenth in 2, but barely missed his try for an eagle and took the birdie instead.

Edinburg to Battle Strasburg Today

Rivals Meet Again After "Umpire Trouble."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., June 18.—Anything can happen tomorrow when Edinburg and Strasburg meet in Edinburg in what promises to be the year's outstanding battle. Each team has sent an umpire "to the showers" so far this season and neither feels any love for the other. Strasburg will seek to avenge the setback handed them Sunday by the Edinburg nine when they were yanked from the second position due to a 7-5 defeat. Ford Irwin, Edinburg's "iron man" and the league's leading pitcher, will get the hill assignment from Manager Coffman to oppose probably Rittenour.

Woodstock will remain idle tomorrow and will go into action Thursday against the Mount Jackson nine which downed them to the tune of 8-3 in Sunday's fray.

Woodstock, the team that was picked to have a "walk-away in the league," is having much trouble and now is battling with Strasburg for the cellar position, while Mount Jackson is leading the race.

'Alabama' Faces Hardest Going After the Furore, Says Gallico

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, June 18.—If there were any who were not inclined to sympathize with the plight of young Alabama Pitts before, they need certainly not be niggardly with compassion now. Because he faces a hard task. He has been the central figure in a cause celebre and he has won his point. He has seen rather the better side of human nature because of his plight.

Pitts is about to see those same people under other conditions.

Now comes the big test. We sit back, all of us, a little self-satisfied. We feel that we did something rather nice. But now if Pitts fails to play good baseball we will, I suspect hear our own voices in the welcoming chorus—"Oh, you bum! Throw that guy out of there! He's a bum!"

And, too, he has burst into the newspapers and that is a heady, potent and habit-forming drug. If he survives this ordeal it will be amazing. I, for one, hope he does. And I hope that he will be able to play good enough baseball to be kept on with the Albany club until he learns to play better. They tell me that the Class AA League is a little over his head.

Incidentally, while all this was going on there was one gentleman who stuck rather valiantly by his guns when he could have bowed his way out without losing much prestige since the ban was not of his making, and that was Mr. Johnny Evers, the old ball player. I don't know how serious Johnny was when this business began but he certainly got awfully stubborn about it when the going got rough. He took his case as high as it could be taken and won. He won't be forgiven. And I don't think he gives a damn. Shake hands with Johnny Evers.

I had a puissant hunch that Landis would let Pitts play.

Upset Takes Mrs. Scott From D. C. Women's Golf Tourney

3 Clubs See Members Move Up

Mrs. Mackenzie Defeats Congressional Champion at 19th.

By Dave Herman.

CONGRESSIONAL Country Club yesterday sent three of its stars into the quarter-finals of the District women's golf championship, which passed the opening day's play at Indian Spring with only one major casualty recorded.

Helen Dettweiler, 19-year-old former Maryland titleholder; Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, wife of the professional, and Mrs. J. F. Dowdall carried the Congressional banner to victories.

The defending champion, Winifred Faunce, of Manor; Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Betty Meckley, of the host club, twice former winner, also triumphed.

Mrs. Scott Eliminated.

To Mrs. Meckley went the honor of shooting the best golf. In defeating Mrs. L. T. Powers, 6 and 5, the one-time champion covered the first nine in 39, four over par. She wasn't so many shots over orthodox figures when the battle ended on the fourteenth green.

Ellen Kincaid, 16-year-old Beaver Dam champion, youngest player in the tournament, passed out at the hands of Mrs. Dowdall, 5 and 4, unable to control her erratic putter.

Mrs. Mackenzie Cards 87.

Good golf was noted in the match in which Mrs. Mackenzie defeated Mrs. Scott on the nineteenth. Mrs. Scott had an 86 and Mrs. Mackenzie an 87. One down at the eighteenth, Mrs. Mackenzie fired three nice shots to the green to take the hole with a 5 to a 6. On the nineteenth Mrs. Mackenzie split the middle with her drive, reached the green in two and won the hole with a par 4 to a 5, as Mrs. Scott's tee shot found the rough.

Featuring today's matches will be the battle between Mrs. Meckley and Mrs. Walper. Miss Faunce and Miss Pope also are expected to put on a dingdong scrap.

Characteristic Poses of Louis

By Bill McCormick.

OLD-TIMERS in the leather-pushing game who always are harking back to the good old days when fighters were fighters and not fourflushing fops, need only to watch Joe Louis in action to be carried back to the heydey of immortals whose styles have been discarded in recent years.

The Black Blaster from Detroit who meets Primo Carnera in New York June 25, is an anachronism—a throwback to the Gay Nineties—in his fighting form. Jack Blackburn, Louis' trainer, was a very good fighter during the bustle and beer age, and he has poured all the old ring lore and manners into his receptive charge.

Note Louis' fighting stance—his normal "squaring off" pose. It is more like the poses employed by the old ring greats than anything that has been seen within the squared circle for years. Examine an old picture of Fitzsimmons squared off. The body is erect. The left is extended, with the elbow close to the body. The head is tucked safely behind the left shoulder. The right is held close to the chest, with the elbow pressed to the body. Compare that with the picture of Louis shown above. Very little, if any, difference.

Dempsey Changed It.

That was the accepted squaring off stance until Jack Dempsey banged his way up the ladder. When Jack Kearns started to develop the old Manassa Mauler, all the leading heavyweights were big fellows like Willard and Carl Morris. Dempsey still was little more than a light-heavyweight, but a lightheavyweight with the punch of a Sazerac cocktail.

Had Dempsey attempted to stand up against those big fellows, his punch would have availed him nothing, the big boys would have picked him or knocked him to pieces with their much longer arms. So Kearns developed the weaving and bobbing style which made Jack famous, and which Jack made famous, to enable his battler to duck under long arms and rip into the body. That started the vogue for the wide open, bobbing and weaving style which almost erased the memory of the styles employed by the old greats.

Notice the second picture shown above of Louis. The Detroit Destroyer has shot his right and is in position to ram home a left hook. The elbows still are close to the body, Joe is perfectly balanced to shoot the portside flipper and his left shoulder still is in position to be drawn up as protection against a right hand.

Louis' elbows seldom are far from his body, most of the time they are pressed close. This enables him to shoot very short punches with all the force of his body behind them. The same theory is used in golf, in which players are counseled to keep their elbows in as they pivot.

Unlike most modern ringmen, Louis at no time covers much territory in the ring. He does not jump or hop away from danger, but stands almost flatfooted, shuffling in continually and ducking just enough to let punches fly harmlessly. This was the method employed by most of the old masters, whose timing and judgment of distance were developed to a degree practically unknown in the ring today.

Alexandria Loses To Culpeper A. C.

All-Stars Use 3 Pitchers in Dull Contest.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., June 18.—Culpeper Athletic Club made it five wins in six starts, defeating the Alexandria All-Stars here this afternoon by a score of 8 to 5 in a slow contest, the visitors using three pitchers. Gardner started for the All-Stars, lasting three and two-thirds innings, allowing six hits for as many runs, two being triples by Campbell and Lowery, before giving way to Garvey, who held the locals to two bingles in three and one-third innings.

McIntyre was on the mound for Culpeper and held the visitors to two hits in five innings. Two singles and an error accounted for a marker in the sixth. Two singles, a walk, an error and a triple by Godfrey in the seventh, put four across for the visitors, McIntyre tightening during the two remaining innings.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICK, Md., June 18.—Brunswick strengthened its grip on first place in the pennant race of the Tri-State League, embracing Frederick, Carroll and Montgomery Counties, by defeating Frederick, in easy style, 26 to 3. New Market set back Wakefield, 15 to 3; Point of Rocks downed Middletown, 12 to 7; Cedar Grove took the measure of Jefferson, 13 to 8; Church Hill won from Mount Airy, 14 to 3, and Damascus put it over on Walkersville, 12 to 7.

It was the seventh straight win for Brunswick. The game was a pitchers' duel with honors even between Tobery and E. Hawes up to the fifth inning when Tobery weakened and the Railroaders put over four runs. Brunswick added eight in the sixth and ten in the seventh inning at the expense of four other hurlers. Hawes allowed Frederick but four scattered hits. The New Market-Wakefield tilt was even until the sixth inning when New Market rallied and put over four runs. Four more in the eighth session clinched the game. Damascus won its fray with Walkersville in the third inning, when ten runs were scored, and Point of Rocks overcame Middletown's lead in the fourth inning and kept ahead the remainder of the game. Cedar Grove won its first game from Jefferson by a rally in the fifth frame, netting five runs, and Church Hill held on to second place by its victory over Mount Airy. The winners scored in six of the nine innings.

D. C. Golf Star Enters State Amateur

ROGER PEACOCK will be on the firing line at Five Farms course today, seeking his third straight Maryland State amateur golf championship.

The Indian Spring star, who had Maryland Association officials worried because his entry was not received Monday, the deadline day, reversed his decision and announced late yesterday he would be a contestant.

Peacock admitted his duties as club secretary had been so heavy that he has had very little time to practice. It is his first tournament since he won the Woodmont invitation in May.

"If my putting holds up I'll be satisfied with the rest of my play," he said yesterday as he stroked one, two, three four balls in a row smack into the practice cup at his home course.

Peacock became the first District golfer in the history of the Maryland championship to win the tournament. That was in 1933 over his home course, when he shot 141 holes in 2 under par, beating Harry Pitt in the finals. Last season Peacock dusted Ernie Caldwell, of Hillendale in the finals at Rolling Road.

Washington will have at least ten of its stalwarts in the big fight. Levi Yoder, Middle Atlantic semi-finalist; Sam Rice, reformed big league ball player and Volney Burnett, of Indian Spring; Hickman Greene, of Manor, Chevy Chase invitation winner, Tommy Webb, of Columbia; Ralph Quinter, jr., Page Hufty, Merle Thorpe, jr., Robert Stead, jr., and Emmons Smith, of Chevy Chase, are among the local entrants.

Today's 36-hole qualifying round will be followed by two rounds of match play Thursday and Friday and the 36-hole finals Saturday.

Occoquan Seeks Games.

Due to a cancellation in their schedule, the Occoquan All-Stars are anxious to book a Sunday game with any strong unlimited team. If interested, call Manager McCollum at Lorton 4-W.

Happy Motoring!

Youth demands Action... and Youth will be Served

Young folks have a way of finding out! That's why you see so many of them driving in where the Esso sign's displayed. For when youth takes the wheel to go places and do things . . motors just have to respond. And they do . . with all their vim, vigor and vitality . . when they are supplied with fuel and oil at the Esso sign.

With Aerotype Esso or Essolene in the tank and Essolube in the crankcase . . engines deliver their utmost power, speed and acceleration with such generous mileage that this surpassing performance soon proves itself to be mighty easy on the pocketbook.

They say youth will be served. More reason why Esso dealers and stations rate so high with the younger set.

It's part of the regular routine to clean windshields, lamps and rear windows . . fill radiators . . inflate tires . . and provide the many other courtesies and services that add so much to the comfort and pleasure of motoring.

Take a tip from youth. Cultivate the habit of stopping at the Esso sign. You'll banish travel troubles if you do and enjoy to the full the thrills of "Happy Motoring."

Even Money Favorite, Oak Glen, Gallops in at Charles Town

Hazen's Filly Also Wins Honors

Commissioner Scores First Victory in Three Years of Racing.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 18.—Charley Jackson, the ancient colored jockey, had to sit in the hot jockey's room all afternoon to ride one horse, but he made the most of his opportunity. His lone mount was Oak Glen, owned and operated by P. J. Fouhy, and it was a winning favorite at a $4 mutuel. Among others, Oak Glen defeated Plain Ace and Miss Toucan in the dash over the 7-furlong course. The time of 1:30 3-5 was fair for the track, which was "spotty" from yesterday's cloudburst.

One of the smallest crowds of the meeting was on hand and the betting suffered. Another heavy rain greeted the customers as the field went to the post for the last race.

Jackson rode a heady race on Oak Glen. He was satisfied to let Plain Ace and Toucan struggle for the doubtful honor of setting the early pace. He was holding Oak Glen a snug third at the first turn. It was on the swing for the stretch that Jackson made his move.

Hazen Filly Wins.

District Commissioner Melvin Hazen saw his 2-year-old filly, Longful, come from behind and win the first race. This was the first time the Capital official has ever seen his colors borne to victory, although he has sent horses to the post several times in the last three years. Longful was capably ridden by Jockey Sammy Palumbo and his victory was a popular one, the daughter of Longworth being a heavily played favorite at a $4 mutuel.

Longful buoyed the hopes of a small army of daily double players, some of whom met grief in the third race. Those who had the lucky combination, which ended with Miss Patches, a 7-1 shot, went to the windows to collect $36 for each $2 ticket. Despite the small crowd, more than $2,000 was played into the double.

Favorites won in the second and fourth races when Small Change, at $5.80, and Silver Arch, $6.40, came marching.

Buntino won the fifth race, coming from far back in the field of eight to score an easy victory and ring up another triumph for the favorite players. Consummation was second and Mayetta third. Buntino, owned by J. Booker, was ridden by F. Booker.

Stock Averages Creep Upward To a New High

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18.—The stock market bulls nibbled away at the share list today. Rails seemed to their taste, along with a few specialties, but their appetite was not voracious.

In spite of the fact that buying seemed selective and cautious, the .3 of a point rise in the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was sufficient to set a new 1935 peak of 44.5. The previous top was made last Saturday at 44.2.

Early carloadings reports for individual roads supplied a convenient background for the rail buyers. Better traffic was reported by such roads as Chesapeake & Ohio, North Western, Illinois Central, Pere Marquette and Nickel Plate.

A more careful attitude in some quarters toward the close of the market was indicated by comment in brokerage quarters, where the possibility of a technical setback was discussed. This probably accounted to a considerable extent for the small turnover in the stock exchange, which amounted to only 885,430 shares.

Some of the utilities found modest followings, although advances were generally small. Public Service of New Jersey made a new high at 36¾, but closed a little below its best.

Cotton Pressed By Liquidation

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18.—Early rallies in cotton on unfavorable effects of rains in the Western belt were followed by declines under liquidation today. The market closed barely steday at net losses of 7 to 9 points.

The trade, spot houses and Liverpool were among the early buyers while local demand was credited to reports of additional Western belt rains over night and floods in these sections. Failure of outside support to develop despite firmness of grains led to reselling later.

Limitation of Powers of United States Government in Granting Financial Aid May Force China to Tie Her Currency to Sterling or Yen.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, June 18.—Negotiations now under way between interested governments, informed international bankers believe, may go a long way toward determining the future political, as well as economic, alignment in the Far East.

The sharp rise in the price of silver metal, the diminution of her stock of white metal and the consequent difficulties encountered by several of her banks threaten to cause a major economic catastrophe in China. Since the United States is committed to continue on her course of raising the price of silver, it is evident that something must be done soon to reform China's monetary system so as to end her dependence on that metal.

Three main solutions of the Chinese monetary problem are now being actively considered. First, it is proposed to link the Chinese currency system to the Japanese yen. Secondly, it is suggested that China join the sterling area. Thirdly, it is urged that China adopt the gold exchange currency standard, and thus establish her financial independence of both Japan and Great Britain, and lean more heavily when necessary upon the United States.

Tie to Yen Is Easiest Course.

The easiest course would be for China to tie her monetary system to the yen. Material aid for such a course has been promised by Japan, for the result would be to increase China's dependence upon the island kingdom. Such a course of action would be strongly disliked by the other great powers, however, particularly by Great Britain and the United States, as it would constitute another long step away from the open-door policy. Particularly if China should find it impossible at some future time to maintain interest and principal payments on the loans that would be made to assure the stability of the new Chinese currency in terms of yen, the way would be opened to extend further Japan's hegemony over her gigantic neighbor.

In order to prevent such a result, Great Britain and the United States would prefer to see China adopt either the sterling or the gold exchange standard. So would most Chinese leaders. But it would be necessary to arrange an international loan for China to make such a change in her currency system possible and effective. This loan would be used to assure the stability of the new Chinese monetary unit until confidence in it could be established and the country's international balance of payments adjusted to the new monetary parity.

Bankers here feel, however, that the negotiation of such an international loan presents serious difficulties. In view of China's debt record and the prevailing political unsettlement, this obligation could not be publicly offered as a straight loan. It would have to be either guaranteed by the powers or made directly as an advance by the interested governments. Now Japan has made direct loans to China on more than one occasion, and Great Britain has guaranteed a number of foreign loans for foreign governments or mandated territories. The United States, however, which is scheduled to play an important part in the rescue of China from monetary chaos, since our silver program precipitated the present difficulties, is seriously hampered in this respect.

It seems unlikely that Congress would be willing to authorize either a substantial direct Government loan to Cuba or a Government guarantee of a private advance to that country. It has been suggested that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation or the Export-Import Bank might make such a loan. It is doubtful, however, whether these organizations can, or should do so, since they were established for different purposes. Some bankers here doubt, in fact, that this country, while interested in aiding China and largely responsible for her present currency difficulties, will be able to join the other powers in making a needed loan.

Joining the Sterling Bloc Raises Political Issue.

As a result, these observers believe that the chances favor China's joining the sterling bloc, and relying primarily upon assistance from Great Britain. However, political complications arising from Japan's expected opposition to such a course will have to be faced.

The adoption by China of the gold exchange standard would involve fewer political complications than would adherence either to the yen or the sterling blocs. However, this course also would involve a large foreign loan to permit the Bank of China to acquire adequate balances in gold standard countries abroad. Also, recent experience has revealed certain risks in such a course.

It is doubted here that either Japan or Great Britain would take the leadership in obtaining a large international loan for China to enable her to adopt an independent currency standard. Only if the United States Government should decide to take the leadership, and obtain suitable powers to exercise it, would this solution of the Chinese monetary problem be possible and a further increase in the financial and perhaps political dependence of that country upon one or another of the great powers avoided.

Local Bankers Start Course At Rutgers U.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Six Washington bankers have enrolled at the first session of the American Institute of Banking Graduate School at Rutgers University, school officials disclosed last night. Two hundred and twenty bankers from 35 States are taking part in the course.

The curriculum will include special class and lecture work and will continue for a year. Members of the local contingent will be taught to solve problems of present day bank management, best methods of handling trust estates, and other involved questions.

Higher education for bankers in their own particular line was first proposed by Harry J. Haas, of Philadelphia, a past president of the American Bankers Association. He took part in the extensive exercises that marked the opening.

Alabama, 2; Arkansas, 2; California, 2; Connecticut, 9; Delaware, 3; District of Columbia, 6; Florida, 2; Georgia, 3; Idaho, 1; Illinois, 8; Indiana, 2; Iowa, 1; Kansas, 1; Kentucky, 2; Louisiana, 3; Maryland, 1; Massachusetts, 9; Michigan, 5; Minnesota, 1; Missouri, 5; Nebraska, 1; New Jersey, 31; New York, 50; North Carolina, 8; North Dakota, 1; Ohio, 7; Oklahoma, 1; Oregon, 2; Pennsylvania, 32; Rhode Island, 1; Texas, 5; Virginia, 6; Washington, 1; West Virginia, 1; Wisconsin, 4, and Wyoming, 1.

Credit Abuse Caused Slump.

Abuse and misuse of the basic principles of credit in the last decade has been fundamentally responsible for the past few years of depression, L. W. Lyons, treasurer of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., declared yesterday in sounding the keynote of the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men, which will convene in Pittsburgh on Tuesday.

"The present upturn will be insured permanency only through an application of sound credit fundamentals," Mr. Lyons, who is convention chairman, pointed out. Special emphasis will be placed on credit problems by means of particular industries in separate industrial group sessions at the Credit Congress of Industry on the opening day.

"A series of events which constantly kept diverting, destroying, or obstructing the flow of the streams of credit," Mr. Lyons said, "was responsible for the unbalanced state of world affairs in recent years which caused fluctuation from the dizzy heights of prosperity to the desperate depths of depression."

Coffee and Currency Sink Low in Brazil

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18.—The Brazilian milreis sank today to the lowest levels in its history in terms of the dollar, losing .10 of a cent at 5.30 cents. At the same time July Santos coffee futures sold at 7.30 cents per pound, off .03 of a cent, the lowest price since April, 1932. Weakness in the coffee market, it was said in trade circles, was largely attributable to the sinking spell in the milreis.

Gold Decision May Cost Firms $30,000,000

Federal Court Rules So. Pac. Must Pay Coupon in Guilders.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, June 18.—A possibility was foreseen here today in financial circles that a Federal Court decision holding the Southern Pacific Co. must pay interest on certain bonds in the equivalent of foreign gold currencies may affect bonds of other American firms totaling approximately $875,000,000.

The decision handed down in Federal District Court yesterday was in the suit of Ann McAdoo, employe of the law firm of Goldman & Altman. Miss McAdoo claimed $13.87 was due her after payment was made in currency of a $20 coupon she held on a Southern Pacific bond. She contended the coupon specified her right to demand payment in Holland gold guilders.

Guy V. Shoup, chief counsel for the Southern Pacific, said the decision would be appealed within 30 days to the Supreme Court of the United States. It was expected a year or more would be required to obtain the high court's opinion.

The Southern Pacific attorneys in court pointed out that bonds of other American firms totaling $875,000,000 would come under the same classification.

Should the Supreme Court rule in favor of the bondholders it would mean a possible total increase of somewhere around $30,000,000 in bond interest that might have to be paid by the affected corporations.

The company had a similar case in a New York State court in which it obtained a favorable decision, but this case also will be appealed, Shoup said. The Bethlehem Steel Co. also obtained a favorable decision in New York.

It was pointed out corporations with gold bonds payable in gold at the old value of $20.67 an ounce would be handicapped if required to settle on the old gold value, should the dollar be returned to gold at the present level of $35 an ounce. Such corporations would in effect have to buy gold at $35 and turn it over to bondholders at $20.67.

Final Hour Sees Gains of 1 to 2 Points; U. S. Issues Steady.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18.—After loafing around most of the day without showing much change, the corporate bond market came to life during the final hour of trading today when renewed activity in junior rails lifted many 1 to 2 points. U. S. Governments were steady.

A large assortment of industrials and utility bonds which, like the rails, had backed and filled in a narrow trading area were pulled into the upward movement but there was a higher degree of selectivity in these groups than elsewhere and a number ended unchanged to a trifle lower.

Ending the fourteenth consecutive session of rising prices, the Associated Press average of 20 rails advanced .3 of a point to 83, while the averages of the other domestic groups were .1 of a point lower to .2 of a point higher. Transfers aggregated $12,446,000, par value, compared with $12,846,000 on Monday. The turnover in Governments approximated $1,070,000 against $1,390,000 the day before.

Especially firm spots in various sections of the list included Utility Power & Light 5½s, up 5½ at 46¾; Paramount Famous Players 6s, up 1½ at 93½, and New Orleans, Texas & Mexico 4½, up 2½ at 29½.

Weather Lifts Wheat and Corn

Excessive Rains Reported in Grain Belts; Oats and Rye Up.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 18.—Gains of 1 to 2 cents a bushel were scored by wheat and corn futures today as the grain market reflected trade advices of unfavorable crop conditions in parts of the winter wheat and nearby corn belts because of excessive rainfall.

Corn led the advance. Reports of further planting delays, particularly in central Illinois and Missouri, increased fears that the 1935 crop may be seriously retarded in some regions. Wheat buyers acted on talk of a wet harvest from the Southwest.

Wheat prices rose 1⅛ to 1¾ cents above the previous finish, closing with July 81¾@81⅞, and corn was 1¼ to 2¼ higher, with July 81⅛@82. Oats gained ⅝ to ¾. Rye 1 to 1⅝ and barley was unchanged.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, June 18 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agriculture)—The wool market here showed a better tone, and quotations were firmer than a week ago as a result of the increased demand during the latter part of last week. Medium grade Ohio and similar bright fleeces were sold recently at the maximum price of the range, 30-31 cents in the grease for strictly combing 56s, ¾-blood and 40s, ¼-blood. Territory wools of the same grade also were more active than a week ago, but the increase in demand was not as marked as for fleeces.

Curb Prices Mixed, Trading Slackens

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18.—Prices were mixed in trend on the curb exchange today. Trading, however, was quiet, transfers approximating 160,000 shares compared with 153,000 yesterday.

Steady to slightly higher tendencies appeared in American Cynamid "B," Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Electric Bond & Share, Pioneer Gold and Creole Petroleum. A lower price drift was reflected in shares of Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Hiram Walker, Humble Oil, Lake Shore, Pan American Airways, Sunshine Mining and International Petroleum.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—Trading was quiter on the stock exchange today and sill-edged securities were the feature of strength due to investment buying. Far Eastern bonds were firmer, while West African mines held steady. Kaffirs, transatlantic shares and industrials yielded on profit-taking and the market closed irregular.

Paris—Rentes continued to improve on the bourse today. Industrials and international issues declined, especially electric, chemical, rubber, coal and metal shares. The close was heavy.

Berlin—Lack of buying orders caused inactivity on the boerse, which was weak throughout the session.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Tasmania, an island state of Australia, was the home of a race now called the Tasmanians when white men first discovered the island. The Tasmanians probably numbered between five and six thousand at one time, were of doubtful origin and were less advanced than the aborigines of Australia. They had neither the weapons of the Australians—the bow, boomerang, spear thrower—nor the ability to make pottery.

These primitive people dwindled away with the beginning of white settlements, and in 1824—just 20 years after settlement began—there were just 340 Tasmanian natives left. By 1865 there were only four, and the last of these is said to have died in 1876.

Pedro Gomez, Mexican revolutionist, soldier of fortune, smuggler, has suffered 15 gunshot wounds in his fighting career—any one of them serious enough to have been fatal—yet he lives as though he were a bullet-proof man.

Once he stood before a firing squad. Five of the rifle bullets took effect in the abdomen and chest. They thought he was dead, but as is the custom the commanding officer of the squad stepped forward and shot him in the head with a revolver. The shot entered behind the ear. A captain nearby complained that that was not the way to administer the final bullet. He stepped forward and shot Gomez between the eyes. Strange as it seems, Gomez came to during the night, crawled away and recovered. He has also been shot three times by U. S. border guards, and five times in battle while serving with Villa.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

Vaudeville Act for Mr. Braddock.

Why, hello, Jimmy! What are you doing on the stage?

It's just curiosity. I became interested in the theater through a fellow named Max Baer.

Is he an actor?

You should watch him in a heavyweight championship fight. I thought I'd die laughing.

That was what Baer thought!

• • • •

Say, Jimmy, were you impressed by Baer's pantomime?

I didn't even notice he drove that kind of an auto.

Skip it. Well, Jimmy, you certainly had the crowd with you that night.

Yeah. And in a couple of rounds I thought I might need it.

Nonsense. Max Baer is just a catcher.

By his performance most of the time I thought he was just a pitcher.

Dizzy Dean.

Oh, no; Baer may be as funny as Dean, but he's not so pugnacious. Now that you have the championship, do you realize what makes you so popular?

No; only that people like to see the underdog win.

Jimmy, what you did was to give back confidence to the married men of America. You showed that a man could go places though married; you proved that there is a life after matrimony; you glorified the American family; you demonstrated that the dole is never necessarily permanent and that higher wages can be brought about without the Blue Eagle.

Gee, did I do all that? It's a good thing I didn't realize it during the fight, it would have worried me.

• • • •

Your victory symbolized the triumph of home life over the cabarets, seriousness over frivolity, the defeat of the hare by the tortoise and the superiority of a wife and three kiddies over a devilish personality and three radio contracts as an influence on character. Do you follow me?

No; I'm just blocking whatever you're throwing.

• • • •

Not me. Remember I had been facing the contempt of landlords, butchers and milkmen. With the wolf at the door five years, why should I be scared by getting $30,000 for meeting the best-natured heavyweight champion in pugilistic history?

What do you know about pugilistic history?

Sometimes I think I was in it from the start.

• • • •

Well, now that you are champ, what are your plans?

I am leaving everything to my two managers.

I thought you only had one manager, a man named Gould.

You forget I am married!

Pits to Conceal Weyerhaeuser Boy Are Found

Discovery Indicates Plans Were Made Long Before Kidnaping.

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., June 18.—Discovery of underground pits, indicating the George Weyerhaeuser kidnaping had been planned long before it was carried out, became known today as Department of Justice agents prepared to lay secret evidence before a Federal grand jury tomorrow.

Government agents will seek to obtain indictments against Mr. and Mrs. Harmon M. Waley, in custody on kidnap charges, and William Mahan, fugitive former convict sought in the case.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Justice Department's bureau of investigation, announced at Washington that Mahan, sought as the "brains" of the $200,000 abduction, had planned the kidnaping a year ago and built an underground pit near Spirit Lake, Idaho, with chains to fasten his intended victim.

Hoover said the pit had been found by citizens in June, 1934, and that a second pit was discovered near Tacoma.

Government agents refused to reveal the location of the second pit, and the whereabouts of a lean-to, apparently near Issaquah, Wash., at which the kidnaped boy was released June 1 upon payment of the ransom.

Hoover said the Spirit Lake and Tacoma pits were similar to the one in which 6-year-old June Robles was placed by kidnapers near Tucson, Ariz., in April, 1934. She was found after 19 days' captivity.

Hoover suggested "Mahan may have read about the Roble pit."

Hoover's agents have charged that Mahan and the Waleys took George to Spirit Lake and Blanchard Idaho, during ransom negotiations, thus coming within the Lndbergh law provisions by crossing a State line with their hostage.

It was believed the curly-haired George identified the Spirit Lake pit, the similar and mysterious pit near here and the lean-to last week.

W. E. Burnett, former chief deputy sheriff at Spokane, said George and his parents lived at Lewiston, Idaho, 140 miles south of the Spirit Lake pit, until two years ago.

Hoover announced the Spirit Lake pit contained a hammer, spade and ax and that attached to a bottom board of the pit were two long chains with which to fasten the victim.

Dr. Scott Reappointed To D. C. Parole Board

Reappointment of Dr. Emmett J. Scott, of Howard University, as a member of the District Parole Board for seven years was announced yesterday by the District Commissioners. The board is composed of Wilbur H. La Roe, jr., Dr. Scott and Frank R. Jelleff.

Revision of the District parole law and the set-up of the board is under study by a special committee headed by Commissioner George E. Allen.

Three Boy Slayers Are Offered Haven

Nebraska Priest Seeks to Care for Bootblacks.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 18.—Three boy bootblacks accused of slaying a man with a revolver filched from a patrolman tonight were offered haven by a Nebraska priest, but officials were undecided what their course would be

M. E. Jacobs, of New York announced that Father E. J. Flanagan, head of the Boys' Home at Boystown, Nebr., had wired an offer of care for Frank Damato, 13, his brother Julius, 11, and Lisbon Lawrence, 13, son of a Negro minister.

The boys, arraigned on a charge of homicide for killing William Walsh, 36, a penniless painter, in a holdup attempt, are in the Queens County Children's Society detention room, waiting grand jury action next Tuesday. The grand jury can indict them for first degree murder which carries the death penality upon conviction.

Garbo Shy? Just Anemic!

That was the explanation given today by May Robson, veteran screen "mother," who said the pale Swedish butterfly is a "shy, frightened fawn," delicate because she hasn't eaten enough liver to overcome her anemia.

Child Labor Fight Described to Clubs

Federal and State efforts to eliminate child labor were outlined yesterday by Miss Agnes Hanna, Children's Bureau social service chief, before 200 boys and girls at the 4-H Club convention in the Agriculture Department.

She explained the pending social security bill contemplated an increased number of public health nurses and social workers.

Miss Hanna analyzed the work of the Children's Bureau She said its functions were divided into three broad classes, welfare services, improvement of child health and elimination of unfavorable labor conditions.

Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent of the London Times, will speak before the group today.
